$25.8M Surplus For ICBC

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corp. of British Columbia had a surplus of $25.8 million for the six months ended Aug. 31, Education Minister Pat McGeer said today.

McGeer, minister responsible for the crown corporation, said in a news release that the automobile insurance act fund had an underwriting surplus og $10.2 million while income from investments contributed an additional $15.6 million to the $25.8 million total.

McGeer said it was not possible to compare these figures with any from the 1975-76 year because employees of the corporation were on strike during the entire second quarter of 1975.

He said it is unlikely that the rate of earnings will be sustained in the rest of the year because fall and winter claims are usually higher.

He said the large surplus occurred because:

—Claims declined dramatically;

—Interest income was higher than anticipated;

—The corporationi reduced overheads to improve efficiency.

ICBC had 41,000 claims reported in March, he said. But the monthly total has been dropping and had reached 25,000 claims in August.

If the trend continues, he said, ICBC will be able to hold the line on rates and will consider refunds.

"The surplus may also be used to establish a rate stabilization reserve which should minimize any future rate increases."

$100M BILL

TORONTO (CP) — Ken Maley, president of the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association, said in an interview Thursday it will cost Air Canada an estimated $100 million to meet a Quebec court order requiring the airline to permit pilots to use French in the cockpits of planes.

Maley said the $100-million figure was an estimate of the cost of translating flight and other Air Canada manuals, plus new equipment.

POUND FIRMS AT $1.62

LONDON (AP) — The pound firmed slightly on London's foreign exchange markets today after a warning by Prime Minister James Callaghan that Britain's freedom might be at stake in the struggle to solve the country's economic troubles.

By late morning, the pound was quoted at $1.6737 U.S., a gain of about seven-tenths of a cent from Thursday's closing price. It was selling at $1.6286 Canadian in Montreal today.

Wine Prices Cut

Fanciers of fine wines received good news Thursday when the B.C. Liquor Branch announced price cuts on about 40 items — mostly imported wines.

Price reductions in provincial liquor stores range from 10 to 65 cents, Nick Clark, B.C. Liquor Adminstration Branch stocks director said, and added that the LAB had already been reducing prices on imported wines for the past few months.

Prices have been cut on about 60 per cent of them, he said.

Clark said the price cuts are possible through cost reductions to the LAB, partly through shipping changes and partly through fluctuating world currencies that worked to B.C.'s advantage.

Several examples of lower-priced wines follows:

—Sichel Claret has gone down 50 cents to $3.25.

—St. Emilion has dropped from $4.30 to $3.85.

—Undurraga, the Chilean red and white has fluctuated from $3.15 down to $2.55 recently, but climbed Thursday to $2.70.

—Beaujolais Superieur drops from $5.15 to $4.95.

—Beaune goes from $8.85 to $8.20. (It was $9.95 a year ago.)

Some special stock will be offered on a one-time only basis sometime this month. They are wines picked up at the Christie's Bordeaux wine auction in London — 550 cases of reds and whites.

PRISONERS CLAIM VICTORY

Hostage Freed, Cons Get Terms

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—The ordeal of British Columbia pententiary guard Wayne Culbert ended at 4:30 a.m. today when prisoners released him to RCMP during a news conference inside the maximum-security prison.

It had been 81½ hours since the 21-year-old guard was grabbed by nine prisoners at 7 p.m. Monday, about two hours after prisoners in the east wing began a wrecking rampage to protest conditions.

Kitchen worker Walter Day, 50, also was taken hostage, but was released late Tuesday night after officials agreed to let members of a prisoner committee read a list of demands at a news conference.

Culbert spoke briefly to reporters before being taken to the prison hospital for examination and a reunion with his wife and family.

Ivan Horvat, president of the seven-man prisoner committee, said Culbert was not harmed and had not been threatened.

He said nine prisoners were involved in the hostage-taking. Three of them due for release soon were allowed to return to the prison's general population.

The six remaining prisoners turned themselves over to the RCMP and were taken to the nearby Burnaby RCMP lock-up where they will await transfer to another federal penitentiary.

Culbert's release and the transfer of the hostage-takers were two of at least 16 conditions laid down in an agreement reached in two long bargaining sessions between prison officials, the prisoner committee and members of the citizens' advisory committee.

Negotiating for the prison were Jim Murphy, Pacific regional director of the Canadian Penitentiary Service, and Ken Peterson, acting prison director in place of Dragan Cernetic who is on sick leave.

The final talks began at about 1:30 p.m. Thursday and continued non-stop until 1 a.m. today when negotiators signed the document.

The agreement, which was termed a victory by Horvat and other members of the prisoner committee, reflected the prisoner's distrust of guards who have demanded increased security at the prison.

The agreement said the RCMP are to remain at the prison for two weeks. After one week the RCMP will meet with prison officials, the prisoner committee and the citizens advisory committee to determine whether its presence is still needed.

In addition, RCMP are to be responsible for removing the 200 prisoners from the damaged east wing, a move to be monitored by both the prisoner and citizen committees.

September Was Summery

September was warmer, drier, sunnier and less windy than normal, Victoria weather office statistics show.

The mean temperature at Victoria International Airport was 14.3 degrees or four degrees warmer than normal.

The Victoria area had 212.5 hours of sunshine compared to the average of 208 hours.

There was only half the normal rainfall, with 15.8 millimetres at the airport with six days of measurable rain. Normally we can expect rain on eight days during September.

Wind speeds were down noticeably at the airport with a mean of 5.8 kilometers per hour recorded compared to an average of 9.2 kph.

Indians Plan Occupation

Cowichan band Indians will occupy the Nanaimo offices of the Indian affairs department if their demands to Ottawa aren't met, native rights leader Larry Seymour said today.

Indian affairs district manager Marcel Jutras was presented with a list of Cowichan demands Wednesday to be forwarded to Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand.

The occupation will take place if Allmand doesn't meet the demands, Seymour said.

And because the Cowichan band office performs the same function as Indian Affairs offices in other areas, Seymour said "we will also occupy our own band office. It is just as ineffective."

"Just because they're brown bureaucrats, they're still bureaucrats as far as we're concerned."

Cowichan band manager Louise Underwood said today she had not been approached by the group about an occupation.

She said Seymour is not a member of the Cowichan band but is from Chemainus, and had no other comment.

In Nanaimo, Jutras said if his offices were occupied, he will keep them open.

"I have a responsibility for 32 other bands on the Island, so the office will stay open.

On Wednesday, the group of about 21 Indians and three whites presented Jutras with a brief saying they are concerned with the deteriorating social conditions on the reserve — one of the largest in B.C. with 1,600 members — rising death and unemployment rates, and unsettled land claims.

They said they wanted a response from Allmand by today or the occupation would begin.

Jutras said this morning he had received no word from Allmand.

Seymour said the most important issue is immediate interim compensation for "stolen lands."

The Indians will use the money to build their own medical, dental and educational facilities on the reserve, he said.

He said the educational process off the reserve for Indians is a failure with a 95 per cent drop-out rate.

"We didn't want to be pushed into this position of occupation, but we will shut the offices down to get action on the demands."

Hospitals Squeezing Smokers Out the Door

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Bed patients at Royal Jubilee Hospital won't be allowed to smoke in future unless they have written authority from their doctor.

That was the toughest of several moves taken by both Jubilee and Victoria General Hospital boards Thursday night as they plotted, with some trepidation, to eventually squeeze smokers — be they patients, visitors, doctors or staff — right out the door.

The latest push originated with doctors using both hospitals who framed firm recommendations and passed them to hospital directors to endorse.

The doctors point out that hospitals exist to restore health and prevent disease and should be community examples, that smokers at best aren't doing themselves any good, that their smoke often bothers those who don't and that the habit makes for a constant fire hazard in a hospital.

The anti-smoking campaign poses one obvious and some subtler problems, the obvious on being a powerful smoker one being a powerful smoker

"I will continue to smoke my pipe," Dr. Weichmann Billung-Mayer, chief of the medical staff at Victoria General, said with a smile as he presented the motion to directors.

For the board to say to its 1,200 employees "you shall not" is not a good idea in 1976, said Mike O'Brien, director of employee relations. He suggested the best approach is through education.

Forcing smokers into exile will inevitably lead to someone sneaking smokes where they shouldn't, increasing the fire hazard, the board was told.

MYSTERY DISEASE BAFFLES DOCTORS

Manchester Guardian

JUBA, Sudan — The regional government of southern Sudan Thursday imposed a strict quarantine on the province of Eastern Equatoria to try to contain a mysterious disease that has caused many deaths in the area.

The epidemic is centred on the town of Meridi, some 250 miles west of Juba, where doctors say at least 40 people have died in the local hospital alone over the last three weeks.

A team of West German road builders based in Meridi was evacuated to Juba Wednesday night, and all roads leading through the province have been closed — including the main road to Wau, second largest town in southern Sudan after Juba.

Health ministry officials in Juba Thursday described the disease as a viral infection but said laboratory tests to check for yellow fever, typhoid and cholera had proved negative

A team of experts, including representatives of the World Health Organization, is planning to fly to Meridi Friday from Khartoum, Sudan's capital, for further investigation.

Symptoms include severe vomiting, diarrhea and fever.

Reduce Demands To End AIB—PM

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says he is willing to dump wage and price controls immediately if big business and powerful unions agree to tone down their demands for higher profits and wages.

"If we can get an undertaking that they will not ask for more than their fair share of the national pie, we'll take controls off tomorrow," Trudeau told about 500 Liberal Party supporters at a reception here Thursday. "We will stop controls because we will have succeeded in what we wanted to achieve."

He said the economically powerful forces of big business and organized labor would first have to agree not to ask for profit or pay increases exceeding the overall growth of the economy.

The real growth of the economy, after inflation is discounted, is expected to run between three and five per cent this year — substantially less than the eight-to-10 per cent wage settlement increases being allowed by the Anti-Inflation Board (AIB) under restraint guidelines.

Trudeau also promised Thursday the government will reassess the anti-inflation program by next March and discussions will be held with the provinces in an attempt to improve the working of wage-and-price controls.

Trudeau was commenting on a speech in which Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer said it was extremely unlikely his province would be in the program after March.

"I'm sure there will have to be all kinds of discussions if the program is to be renewed or prolonged," Trudeau told reporters.

Fibreglass-eating bug found in West Coast waters

Mighty Mite Eats Glass Boats

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A marine organism named polyestermite is eating fibreglass boats, once believed impervious to attack.

The story of the mighty mite is told in this month's edition of the American boating magazine, Sail.

The organism was named polyestermite after it was first reported in Britain more than six years ago.

The shocker for North American fibreglass boat owners came recently when a Los Angeles man went to check his boat after a two-month absence.

From the dock he could dimly make out the outline of her deck under the water. When the boat was raised all that was left of the underwater portions were a few shreds of glass fibre.

Above the waterline, the boat's deck and cabin housing were also being consumed. Close inspection showed marine organisms, up to half an inch long, with much of their bodies buried in the disintegrating laminate.

Victoria marine surveyor Dick Meadows says local waters appear free of the polyestermite but he will confer with his Canadian, American and British counterparts when he attends the annual meeting of the National Association of Marine Surveyors in San Francisco next week.

Some boating people have speculated that lack of information on the polyestermite may be due to the desire of governments to protect the petroleum industry which supplies most of the polyester resin used for fibreglass.

The exact origins of the polyestermite remain classified but a reputable marine zoologist says the organism evolved from the gribble (Limnoria Lignorum), whose major food source was wood.

With the disappearance of many wooden hulled boats, the gribble has now evolved to the state where it can break down and digest polyester resin.

Sail magazine says the creature is believed to have three pairs of front legs which are used to tenaciously attach itself to any smooth surface, such as painted or unpainted gelcoat.

After doing this it undergoes a dormant period for about three days during which its color changes from a pale, almost translucent hue, to a dull brownish green. The color change is due to the buildup of a chemical, styrenic acid, within the body.

Marina Trade Floating South

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

While many British Columbia marinas are going broke, those on the American side are having a banner year, according to a survey by the Times today.

Those on the Canadian side reported revenues this year at best barely equal to 1975 and at worst down 70 per cent from last year.

Meanwhile, the flow of Canadian money into U.S. marina tills has never been higher.

"Your Canadian inflation is beautiful as far as we are concerned," says Neil Tarte, owner of Roche Harbor Resort and Marina at San Juan Island.

"The Canadian money in our till is up 20 per cent from last year. It would have been higher if we hadn't had all that rain in the last two weeks in August."

All the American marinas had a great year because of the infusion of Canadian money, he said.

"For the first time they are buying gasoline down here because it is only 60 cents a gallon compared to about 75 cents up there. Despite our smaller gallon, Canadians are buying here for the first time.

"And food prices are lower, they tell us. Canadian inflation is bringing us a lot of business."

And it is keeping many Americans in home waters.

"They don't like Canadian prices and they get the feeling they're not welcome up there. There's a bit of a Yankee-go-home atmosphere."

Meanwhile in British Columbia, several marinas are on the verge of packing it in.

The Maple Bay marina has indicated it may go into receivership.

Nearby, the Genoa Bay Marina has also reported a sharp drop in revenue but will continue in business.

Owner Lehn Lambrecht is hopping mad about the decline, however, and he plans to write a letter to the premier about it.

"The Americans have stopped coming," Lambrecht said.

"The ferry rate increase is the main problem but there are many others. Americans complain about the (provincial) fishing licence and the Top U.S. Officials Initiated Ford Probe

By BOB WOODWARD AND CARL BERNSTEIN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The current investigation into President Gerald Ford's congressional campaign finances was initiated in July by U.S. Attorney General Edward Levi and other senior justice department officials, it was learned Thursday.

The inquiry was begun when the justice department, acting on information given the FBI by an informant, formally referred allegations involving Ford's past campaigns to the office of the Watergate special prosecutor.

These disclosures were made Thursday by deputy attorney general Harold Tyler in an interview with The Washington Post. Tyler's comments represent the first on-the-record discussion of the matter by any law enforcement official involved in the case.

Although Tyler refused to discuss the substance of the allegations in detail, other justice department sources continued to describe them as "significant" and "serious." These sources said the investigation involves allegations that Ford converted campaign contributions to his personal or improper political use.

Tyler would say only that "to the extent I know about it, this involves President Ford."

Tyler's disclosure that the special prosecutor's inquiry was initiated by the senior officials of Ford's own justice department undercut suggestions by White House officials that the investigation might be politically motivated.

For several years, Ford's aides — as well as his running mate, Sen. Robert Dole — have suggested that special prosecutor Charles Ruff initiated the inquiry as a means of aiding the campaign of Ford's Democratic opponent, Jimmy Carter.

According to Tyler, the decision to refer the allegations to the special prosecutor was made after discussions involving Levi, FBI director, Clarence M. Kelley, associate FBI director James B. Adams and Tyler himself.

"He wanted it handled by the right office," Tyler said. "We just wanted to get it to a prosecutor."

Ford told a press conference Thursday that he had never diverted any campaign funds to his personal use.

COMMITTEE SET ON RENT

A special cabinet committee has been established to deal with the landlord-tenant situation in British Columbia.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Thursday the committee has broad terms of reference to consider the provincial rental situation.

The committee also will examine the existing forms of rent control and standards for permitted rental adjustments.

The attorney-general said landlords who decide that rent increases are necessary before January of next year will be limited to a maximum increase of 10.6 per cent.

Palestinians Stagger As Syrian Tanks Roll

BEIRUT (AP) — Syrian tanks advancing under air cover closed in today on two Palestinian strongholds in a final drive to force the guerrillas off the vital Beirut-Damascus highway and out of Lebanon's civil war.

The Syrians renewed their four-day mountain offensive after Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat rejected Syrian terms for a ceasefire.

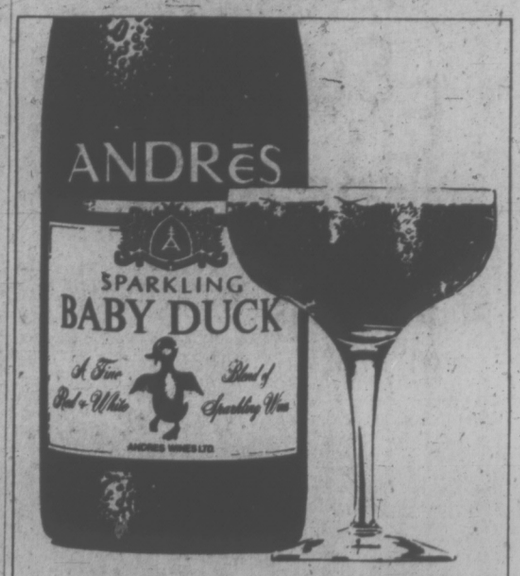

The Soviet Union renewed its call for withdrawal of Syrian intervention troops from Lebanon, but Syrian President Hafez Asad said in an interview published today: "We are not willing to compromise or appease anyone because we consider Syria's national interests are at stake in Lebanon."

"We expected our friends the Soviets to have understood our position and to have taken our side," Assad said.

"Did our Soviet friends expect us to stand idly by while our brothers the Lebanese issued appeals after appeals for help?"

The tanks encircled the guerrillas' easternmost position on the highway, 12 miles east of Beirut, as Soviet-made fighters of the Syrian air force made low passes overhead.

Right-wing Christian Lebanese claimed their militias opened an offensive from the west to help the Syrians.

toria General tabled the motion for "more compact wording."

At Jubilee, where the campaign to discourage smoking began a couple of years ago, the board tightened other rules.

Discussions will open with the hospital auxiliary aimed at eventually stopping sale of tobacco in their gift shop. It's a touchy matter because the auxiliary produces substantial sums, $100,000 this year, for the hospital and some of it comes from shop profits.

Patients who are mobile in the hospital and others will be required to confine their smoking to designated areas, Dr. Ray LeHuquet, medical director, said today.

Black Leaders Seek Unity

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Rhodesian black nationalist leaders Joshua Nkomo and Bishop Abel Muzorewa met secretly today in an attempt to heal the rift in the African National Council (ANC), which both claim to lead.

Nkomo, widely speculated to become Rhodesia's first black prime minister, said the half-hour talks went well.

After the meeting, held in Gaborone, Botswana, both men said they would meet again soon in Salisbury, probably on Moriday. Bishop Muzorewa is expected to return to the Rhodesian capital Sunday after more than one year of self-imposed exile.

The meeting was seen as part of an effort by Rhodesia's nationalists to regain some kind of unity now that the breakaway British colony's white minority government has agreed to black majority rule in two years.

Nkomo and Bishop Muzorewa have been rivals since constitutional talks with the Rhodesian government failed last year and shattered the ANC's unity.

British envoy Ted Rowlands, a foreign office minister of state, and his U.S. counterpart, William Schaufele, flew today from Gaborone to Maputo, Mozambique. They said everything was on course for the conference called by Britain to plan the way to change to majority rule.

But the Rhodesian government says it will not begin discussions on a constitution at initial talks.

A government spokesman said the conference, scheduled to be convened by Britain somewhere in southern Africa in the next two weeks, would deal only with ways of implementing the Anglo-U.S. proposals.

In Umtali, Roman Catholic Bishop Donal Lamont was sentenced to 10 years with labor here today for not reporting the presence of African nationalist guerrillas.

The Irish-born clergyman, bishop of this eastern Rhodesian town near the Mozambique border and a critic of the minority government's race policies, said he will appeal.

He pleaded guilty during the 2½-day trial to four charges of failing to report the presence of guerrillas at a mission station and of inciting others to do the same.

OTTAWA REBUFFS MAN. AIB APPEAL

BRANDON (CP) — The federal cabinet has rebuffed the Manitoba government's efforts to get higher wages for government liquor store workers, the annual convention of the Manitoba Federation of Labor was told today.

William Jackson, president of the Manitoba Government Employees' Association, said Ottawa has rejected a personal appeal from Premier Ed Schreyer to have the workers' wage rollback rescinded.

He also said he was told legal action is being launched against the province by the office of anti-inflation administrator Donald Tansley because of the dispute.

There was no immediate confirmation from government sources.

The provincial government has been fighting against an order from Tansley reducing a wage increase for about 400 liquor store workers to 12 per cent from nearly 24 per cent.

He said any withdrawal would effect the program. "It can't work in only parts of Canada."

Schreyer, who has objected to some AIB rulings including one on Manitoba Liquor Control Commission workers, said there must be major changes in the program if his province is to remain under controls.

In Montreal AIB's director-general of prices and profits branch Reed Scowen said the AIB had uncovered $10 million in excess profits on $13 billion of revenue by the end of August.

Scowen told a news conference that the program also monitors interim excess profits which companies involved must eliminate by the end of the year.

He said the reason why General Motors has not increased automobile prices on its 1977 models is the company's interim excess profits.

"We talked to them and they said they would not increase their prices until costs catch up," Scowen said.

Firemen Boycott Bombs

BELFAST (UPI)—Belfast's disgruntled firemen decided today to let the city burn if terrorists set bombs in business premises.

The firemen began a "bomb boycott" under which they refuse to answer calls to commercial locations — whether to put out fires or to stand by while suspected bombs are investigated.

Convicts Claim Victory

The RCMP also was to take full responsibility for the transfer of all prisoners to other federal prisons.

The agreement also said there was to be no physical punishment of any prisoner involved in the insurrection and no internal disciplinary charges laid until after a public inquiry into the incident, the worst in the 98-year history of the fortress-like prison overlooking the Fraser River.

Prisoners in the wrecked east wing are to be removed to livable areas and receive medical treatment if necessary.

Prison and RCMP spokesman said it may be a day or two before any wholesale transfer can be accomplished.

There had been reports of dysentery because most of the toilets were destroyed by the east-wing prisoners during the riot.

Murphy said some of the prisoners may be transferred to the auditorium.

The agreement also provides that prisoners seeking transfer to other prisons be referred to a committee made up of the regional transfer board and members of the citizens committee.

Prisoners who obtain transfers will be able to take their personal effects with them.

Members of the prisoner committee will be permitted to meet any prisoners held in the super-maximum-security unit.

There also is a "double-jeopary" clause which says if criminal charges are laid in conection with the incidents, no internal charges will be laid.

The prisoner committee will continue until another is elected and there will be a continuing dialogue between the prisoner committee, the citizens' committee and prison officials on outstanding matters.

Deputy attorney-general David Vickers said today there will be a normal police investigation into the hostage-taking incident.

He said charges could be laid if the investigation turns up enough evidence, although he added there may be problems identifying those involved.

Vickers stressed the case would be not treated any differently than a normal investigation.

Porpoise Finds Help in Fight for Life

VANCOUVER (CP) — An injured porpoise was fighting for its life at the Vancouver Aquarium today after it struggled to a fisherman's boat in Pender Harbor 42 miles northwest of here.

"What surprised me so much was that it swam right up to the boat — 'could you help me,' like," said fisherman Alf Jesberger.

Jesberger said he spent about an hour trying to lasso the animal and finally got it aboard his troller. He took it to a marina and arranged for the aquarium to pick it up.

"It was really in bad shape," he said. "It would have been dead by now if it had stayed in the water.

"It was actually drowning."

The five-foot animal now is in quarantine in a small research pool at the aquarium where it lies in a floating sling, too weak to swim or maintain itself above water.

"It's really a sweet little porpoise," said Stefani Hewlett, assistant to the aquarium curator. "We have really worked hard on this animal and we'd really, really like it to make it."

But aquarium workers were not optimistic, calling its survival odds very low.

The animal has a series of punctures along its side which seem to be teeth marks, perhaps from a killer whale or sea lion, Hewlett said.

It probably swam to the fisherman's boat because porpoises in trouble look for something to beach themselves on to keep their air blowhole above water, she said.

"It probably looked to the boat for support. If they don't beach themselves they know they will drown."

The porpoise would be a find for the aquarium because they're so fast and elusive that catching them is difficult and expensive, she said.

Mars Life Chances Fading

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The theory that there is life on Mars has suffered another setback with the failure of Viking 2 to find organic compounds.

New information received from the spacecraft on Thursday showed that no organic compounds—the chains of carbon atoms found in all life as it is known on earth—were found in Viking 2's first look.

Scientists were quick to point out that the initial failure did not positively signal the absence of life on the red planet, but one Viking team member admitted it would be difficult to reconcile the new findings with the life-on-Mars theory.

JAPAN RETURNS PLANE OCT. 10

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan will notify the Soviet Union Saturday that it is ready to return a MiG25 fighter plane now being stripped of its intelligence secrets by Japanese and U.S. engineers, government sources said today.

They said Japan will propose to have the plane ready for shipment from the port of Hitachi, north of Tokyo, around Oct. 10.

That would be 34 days after the top-secret MiG was landed at Hakodate City, 500 miles north of Tokyo, by defecting Soviet air force Lieutenant Viktor Belenko.

There is mounting Soviet anger at Japan for conducting an intelligence inspection of the plane, and calling in the United States to help.

Since Belenko's defection in the MiG from a base in Soviet Siberia, the Russians have seized six Japanese fishing boats for alleged intrusions of Soviet waters in the Kuriles Islands north of Japan.

A tour of the Soviet Union by a Japanese women's volleyball team has been called off because of a Soviet refusal to issue visas to the Japanese players. The Soviets also refused visas to members of a Japanese chess team who had been scheduled to come to Moscow.

Irish Jail Soviet Fishboat Captain

DUBLIN (UPI) — Irish naval authorities escorted a giant Soviet trawler into Cork harbor today and temporarily threw its captain into jail, climaxing a tense sea confrontation in which armed Irish troops boarded the ship.

An army spokesman said the trawler will be handed over to Irish police to face charges of fishing illegally inside the Irish Republic's 12-mile territorial limit.

The tough Irish reaction to the alleged poaching was an indication of the government's determination to preserve the nation's rich fishing grounds for native fishermen.

"There will be no nonsense — no matter how big they come," an official said.

Skipper Nikolai Shinkaruk of the 2,500-ton trawler Belomorye made a brief court appearance on charges of illegal fishing and was ordered held in custody until another hearing later in the day.

The court action ended a 24-hour drama at sea in which armed Irish troops boarded the Soviet ship after the skipper defied an order from the tiny Irish fishery protection vessel, Grainne, to sail to Cork harbor on the southeastern coast of Ireland.

The Grainne, skippered by Lt. Commander Patrick Kavanagh, chased the Soviet vessel and fired warning shots across her bow, forcing her to stop 15 miles southeast of the Irish coast.

The Grainne put an armed boarding party on the trawler, but the Soviet skipper refused to proceed under escort to Cork.

A second Irish vessel, the Banba, rushed to the scene and also put armed men on the trawler.

The defiant Soviets insisted they would not budge until they contacted the owners of the trawler.

The Irish government reacted swiftly. It sent a platoon of armed troops aboard the Soviet vessel accompanied by a Russian-speaking officer "to clear up any language confusion."

In Dublin, foreign office officials met with Soviet embassy officials to find a solution to the deadlock.

The end came Thursday night when the Russian skipper capitulated and agreed to proceed to Cork under escort, but the Irish troops stayed aboard.

Last Monday, a big trawler from Bulgaria was escorted into Cork and fined $166,000 for illegal fishing.

TANKER LIMIT BATTLE LOOMS

OLYMPIA (AP) — Raising the spectre of an "unlimited intrusion of under-equipped and over-sized supertankers" into Puget Sound, Washington State Governor Dan Evans says he is prepared to call a special legislative session if need be.

The governor said Thursday that he also will enlist the aid of Congress and the United States coast guard while the state appeals the federal court decision late last week which overturned the state's tanker size-limit law.

The law bans oil supertankers 125,000 deadweight tons and larger from the confined waters of the sound. A three-judge federal panel held that the federal government has pre-empted the state's rights in the area.

U.S. District Judge Walter McGovern, meanwhile, said he would be unable to rule today on a request by Atlantic Richfield Co. that the state be blocked from enforcing the tanker law. He said he would be out of state and still needed to confer with the other two judges.

A new supertanker was scheduled to arrive at the Atlantic Richfield Co.'s Cherry Point oil refinery Saturday, but ARCO officials said they would avert a confrontation with the state by complying with the disputed state law.

ARCO said the tanker would hire tugboat escorts required under the law for the vessel's passage up Rosario Strait.

U.S. Flu Shots Starting Today

Times News Service

The United States rolled up its sleeves today for the first swine flu shots, the largest immunization program in the country's history. But some state health officials said they were uncertain when and whether they would get all the vaccine they need.

A survey of state health officials showed that most of them had initial shipments of vaccine from companies contracted by the federal government. Some complained that their allocations arrived piecemeal and many were worried that future irregular shipments might prevent orderly administration.

Congress allocated $135 million for manufacture and distribution of the vaccine, and the Atlanta-based national Centre for Disease Control (CDC) made sure initial shipments got to pickup points.

A spokesman at the CDC said the federal centre expects 177 million doses will be available at state health departments by late November, with more on the way. About 25 million doses have been shipped to states so far.

William Schatz of the Wisconsin state department of health and social services predicted that much of the vaccine would arrive too late to do any good.

He cited an estimate that Dec. 15 is the last day a person can take the vaccine and expect it to be effective in preventing the flu, which has been traced to the same disease that killed 500,000 Americans in 1918-19.

The present delivery schedule shows Wisconsin will have less than two-thirds of its promised 4.1 million doses by then.

One of the first clinics to administer the vaccine will be at a Health Fair in Indianapolis, where persons in the high risk groups — primarily the elderly and those with chronic diseases — will get vaccinations for protection against both the swine and A-Victoria types of influenza.

The national immunization program schedule calls for vaccination of the high-risk groups first, followed by immunization of the general population.

SUN-POWERED CARS?

TEL AVIVI (Reuter) — An Israeli engineer has designed what he contends is the world's first solar-powered car and predicts that in 10 years the country will be dotted with stations where drivers will fill up on sunshine.

The two-seater car has large panels containing almost 600 solar cells covering the roof and hood. The panels, which convert the sun's energy into electricity, are connected by hundreds of colored wires to eight batteries under the seats.

"The trick is to park the car in the sun rather than in the shade as you normally would," says the inventor, Prof. Arye Braunstein, head of the power engineering department of Tel Aviv University.

The Business of Education

If Education Minister Dr. Pat McGeer thought he had difficulties with the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia wait until he announces the results of a current review of curricula in B.C. schools. Few things engender more debate than what should be taught in schools. Currently there is much popular sentiment for a return to the three "Rs," or the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic. Renewed emphasis on traditional education has resulted in part from university complaints that many provincial high school graduates cannot read and write properly. Meanwhile, McGeer is being bombarded with ideas from well-meaning groups on what they think should be the shape of education.

One of the most interesting comes from that tireless group of lobbyists, B.C. Chamber of Commerce. It suggests a program of basic economics in the school system because many businessmen apparently feel that our current school system does not fit students to get along in modern society. In a sense the chamber is correct. Schools continue to teach the ideal, while businessmen obviously want hardheaded, pragmatic realists who understand the profit motive and the iniquities of government taxation.

Other groups feel just as strongly that Christian religious instruction should be an integral part of the curriculum. In fact, B.C. law states that the Lord's prayer and a bible reading should start each school day, although it is a dictum rarely enforced.

It is interesting to speculate on what kind of curriculum would fit students to get along in modern society. Certainly, greed and self interest would be an important area of study. Selfishness would have to be taught as a virtue. A course on violence would also be mandatory. Morality could be thrown into a text on ancient history.

The kind of economics program advocated by the chamber appears to be an attempt at inculcating students with the principles of what one might call "free enterprise," for lack of a more precise term.

A public school system which attempts to educate Canadian children should never serve vested interests, be they economic, religious or any other. If we have any hope for a progressive, enlightened populace education's primary task is to teach ideals and enable students to think for themselves. The education minister, who is also a distinguished scientist, should not be swayed by arguments to fit education to an imperfect society. Rather it is the function of educated people to make society more perfect. If we reverse the natural order of history we will inherit a homogenized society of unthinking robots, not unlike some organizations that continually propose absurd ideas.

The Real Bellwether

Despite what the federal government has been telling us about the real progress made in the fight against inflation, there's nothing more revealing than the old cynic's maxim, do what I say, not what I do. This week Ottawa had the begging bowl out to its subjects, soliciting for Canada savings bonds. (Last year they pulled in a respectable $4 billion.)

A year ago the government of Canada guaranteed to pay you 9.38 per cent on your investment in their bonds, held to maturity. This was at the raging height of double-digit inflation, just before Prime Minister Trudeau acted on Thanksgiving Day and announced the program of controls and the Anti-Inflation Board to administer it.

So a year later, after the AIB has made considerable gains and the controls are supposedly working — according to Ottawa — how much is the federal government willing to pay you for the use of your savings over a nine-year period? CSBs this year carry an interest rate of 9.13 per cent, a touch down from last year's record high interest rate.

Put another way, that's the government's personal inflation indicator, a sign of how it believes the fight is going. If Ottawa is willing to pay more than nine per cent per annum until 1985, that tells you a lot more about inflation than any $1.1 million advertising campaign.

The government has to compete with other borrowers. Banks are offering the same rate and more — the longer the term, the higher the rate. Interest rates are as much a part of inflation as the cost of a loaf of bread or how much a millworker is going to get on his pay cheque. And interest rates aren't coming down because people don't believe the soothing words coming out of Ottawa.

PAUL WHITELAW

Is This Ford's Watergate?

WASHINGTON — Back in the cozy pre-Watergate era, blond fringe benefits like Liz Ray (the secretary who couldn't type) and campaign contributions that ended up in politicians' pockets were an accepted part of life on Capitol Hill.

The rules of the congressional game have changed, of course, in the newly-puritannical atmosphere of post-Nixon Washington. But until recently many senators and congressmen looked the other way and justified risque or illegal follies with the dictum: "Everybody does it."

Now, the Special Watergate Prosecutor is investigating the possibility that "everybody"—at least when it came to campaign contributions—included a congressman named Gerald Ford.

The probe into the president's finances while he was still a member of the House of Representatives may become an explosive issue in the American presidential election campaign.

The current Watergate special prosecutor, Charles Ruff, has begun looking into allegations that Ford illegally diverted contributions to his congressional campaigns to personal or improper political use.

Although Ruff has refused to comment publicly about the investigation, news reports have said it centres on contributions from two unions, the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association and the Seafarers International Union.

Ford, as a congressman, supported legislation favored by Maritime unions and the U.S. shipping industry.

President Gerald Ford faces probe of shady election contributions.

Surprise, Surprise!

The contributions—if properly reported and used for legitimate campaign expenses—would not violate the law.

Within the White House, Ford's advisers have suggested the probe is designed to embarrass the president in the midst of an increasingly-close election campaign.

They express surprise at the investigation, and point to the search by the House judiciary committee for political skeltons when Mr. Ford was nominated as vice-president in 1973.

"If you look into the committee report," presidential press secretary Ron Nessen said this week, "they looked into campaign contributions, I think from 54 to 72. And, I think the final report said something like a number of questions were raised, and we looked into them and they were all resolved.

With news reports of the investigation threatening to mar Ford's image as a Mr. Clean who restored public confidence in government after Watergate, the president could clear the air quickly and easily. The way to do that would be to ask the special prosecutor to make a public report about the investigation and what, if anything, it has uncovered.

However, Richard Cheney—the White House chief of staff — has said there are "no plans" to approach Ruff. To ask such a question, he noted, "should assume the question needs to be asked . . . I don't think it does."

The president has received the support of Leon Jaworski, the former special prosecutor who helped topple Richard Nixon. Jaworski has said he found no cause for legal action when he investigated contributions made by the maritime unions and other groups to the president's congressional campaigns.

"Nothing we found called for further action. There is no connection with Watergate," he stated.

With the special prosecutor's office remaining silent about the investigation, details about the probe have come mostly from an official of the marine engineers union and current and former officials of the Republican committee in Kent County, part of Ford's old Grand Rapids, Mich. congressional district.

According to news reports, FBI agents have questioned Republican officials. But the officials have told reporters they know of no money being "laundered" and passed illegally to Ford.

Jesse Calhoun, president of the Marine Engineers, has confirmed that records of the union's campaign contributions have been subpoenaed, but also expressed surprise at the investigation.

The subpoenas have been issued by a grand jury, a unique and controversial American legal institution.

Grand juries, which have 23 members as opposed to the 12 who sit on juries during trials, are supposed to protect individual reputations by conducting its proceedings under a cloak of secrecy. However, they can easily become "star chambers."

That happens when the targets of grand jury investigations — designed to determine whether prosecutors have sufficient evidence to justify the laying of criminal charges — are identified in leaks to the news media. The mere fact of an investigation, like an arrest, even without a conviction, can destroy a reputation.

Destructive Potential

Because testimony by witnesses and other evidence at grand juries is taken in secret, public accounts of the proceedings are often one-sided, serving the interest of the person doing the leaking. In addition, a person being investigated is not present, nor is his lawyer, except when — or if — the subject of the investigation is asked to testify. That makes it difficult if not impossible to refute public speculation about such probes.

While Republicans suggest that the investigation into Gerald Ford's past is a politically-motivated witch-hunt, Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter is maintaining a cautious silence on the matter. That is a politically prudent course, for if the investigation turns out to have been a "will-o-the-wisp", criticism of the president by Carter could be resented by the voters.

Nonetheless, in a capital that has come to expect scandal and wrong-doing in high places, the investigation of the Watergate special prosecutor has Republicans and Democrats holding their breath as election day approaches.

DAVID MACDONALD

German Election a Toss-up

MUNICH — West Germany's anxious voters carry the enigma of their electoral intentions into the polling booths on Sunday with politicians and pollsters of all parties unable to forecast an outcome.

Late opinion polls did show marginal leads for the ruling Social Democrat and Liberal coalition over the opposition conservative coalition, the highest giving a 51.1 per cent to 47.5 per cent edge but the governing coalition was not impressed and ran scared to the end.

Surprisingly, there was little interest in the election among West Germany's neighbors despite the fact that West Germany is today the most important country in western Europe and will continue to be a dominating factor in the developing future of Europe.

In the course of the campaign, the Social Democratic Party and Free Democratic Party were badly shaken by the discovery of vigorous voter dissatisfaction, despite a group of economic indicators that is the envy of most western democracies.

Fear of Terrorists

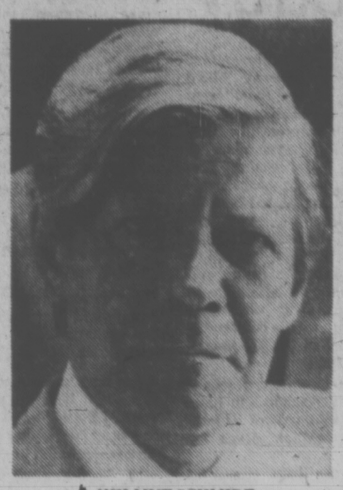

For the opposition coalition of the Christian Democratic Union and the Bavaria-based Christian Social Union, the campaign proved to be a satisfying series of indications that a conservative groundswell was moving the voters their way. But they admitted privately that it is hard to say if their hour had really struck or if they were just on the fringe of a national change that might bring them to power in a future election.

Although no single issue dominated public discussion, there were a number of things exercising different sections of the electorate.

Fear of terrorist radicals, concern about the militantly leftist youth wing of the SPD, known as the Jusos (short for young socialists) and widespread resentment at the new get-tough attitude of East German border guards, with their shoot-to-kill orders, all called forth conservative German instincts. Similarly, worry was plainly evident about rising prices and about West Germany's economic future.

From the left and liberal end of the spectrum there was some spirited protest against the anti-radical regulations which require those accused of radicalism to prove they are not radicals and which ban them from any government post.

The second was a loan, credits and public support for democratic elements that helped to prevent a 1975 communist takeover of Portugal's revolution, when U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger had gloomily assessed the situation as completely hopeless.

HELMUT SCHMIDT
. . . chancellor's job at stake

The chancellor has furthermore become established as the sternest and most telling critic of the most unfortunate developments of the Common Market. West Germany foots most of the bill for the Common Market and for the occasional follies of the bloated Brussels bureaucracy. Schmidt has constantly urged fiscal in the sometimes bizarre subsidy plans that have wrecked normal market workings and shored up incompetent producers.

But since some of the oddest support schemes give substantial returns to powerful sections of the French electorate, he has sometimes backed down in the greater interests of European unity and good Bonn-Paris relations.

Most surprising to an outsider of the charges against Chancellor Schmidt has been the one that the long-term economic future is worrisome for West Germans.

Senior figures in all major parties, however, explain this as a triggering of the folk memory of the fearsome inflation of the inter-war Weimar Republic's collapsing economy, as well as of the financial and structural devastation of the years immediately after the Second World War.

The one politician who has worked like a beaver to exploit this particular fear has been the Bavarian known to SPD supporters as Idi Alpin.

Bread Is Freedom

In Munich, Franz Josef Strauss delivered a bellowed, two-hour diatribe that mixed calls for an end to national headhanging about the Second World War with venomous attacks on Schmidt as a liar, economic incompetent and crypto-marxist. Leader of Bavaria's Christian Social Union, he moved his bulky figure around the platform restlessly, reminding the enraptured crowd of 25,000 of his long experience in federal government, predicting economic collapse unless he returned as finance minister in the Conservative coalition and stating as a fact that by 1978 there will not be a deutschmark left in the national treasury to pay anyone's pension, if the SPD remains in power.

His viperish tone is partly explained by his fear up to the last that the SPD would produce evidence positively linking him and his party with kickbacks from Lockheed for purchases of Starfighter jets in the early 1960s.

Almost as extreme, however, was the statement at a rally in the nearby town of Rosenhiem by Agriculture Minister Josef Erzl of the Free Democratic Party that while one would not liken Strauss to Hitler, Strauss was a "know-it-all politician just like one we had in Germany before."

More typical of the tone of the campaign was the temperate and philosophical speech of SPD chairman Willy Brandt to a crowd of 10,000 in the Bavarian town of Coburg.

Quoting a philosopher of 120 years ago, he told them: "Bread is freedom and freedom is bread. That is what is important to all our countrymen."

Education

I was disappointed and shocked at Dr. Scott Wallace's remarks in his speech to the Abbotsford Rotary Club on the subject of education. The teacher's job, he claimed, is "to teach, not to tackle social problems. Teachers seem to think they are as much therapists as educators, emphasizing personality growth and social happiness."

While no one would more readily agree with Dr. Wallace than I that the basics in school need to be emphasized, teachers can only work with the children who are sent into their care. If these children are bred in a home where insolence is tolerated, where parents are continually downgrading and criticizing the teacher, where father boasts of what he gets away with on the job, where a bookcase is an unknown piece of furniture, and where intelligent conversation at the meal table is unknown, then don't expect teachers to have much success with their students.

Remember, too, that half the students in our high schools shouldn't be there. They should be in technical training institutions or apprenticed, but since society demands a grade 12 education and the schools have to babysit thousands of uninterested students because our economy can't provide work for them, naturally scholastic standards are lowered. Unless a person is motivated to learn, no amount of good teaching can make him learn. This is a basic tenet of education.

Fortunately there are enlightened school boards in B.C. who are providing counsellors trained to handle the more extreme cases, although certain local boards are cutting out these essential personnel, but every teacher who is worth being called a teacher can cite case after case in his or her classroom every year of problem children who need their special care and concern. If a child blushes from the neck upwards every time she or he is asked a question in class, do you ignore that embarrassment or try to help the child overcome it? If a child shrinks into his shell and is so painfully shy that his school work suffers, do you simply give him a tongue lashing and make him work harder?

Come now, Dr. Wallace. As a doctor you know that a human being cannot be compartmentalized. If I told you that your job was to heal people and not be concerned with their mental attitudes, would you accept that? If so, you're living in the dark ages.

Teachers are dealing with people, with the richest resource of our nation, and one of their many responsibilities is to produce persons who have the tools to live and work in their community. I agree that a mastery of the three Rs is a major tool, but it is useless if the person possessing it is not physically and socially able to use it. Education, Dr. Wallace, is for the "whole man" and woe betide our civilization when our teachers forget that! — M. Phillips, 988 Claremont Avenue.

Cap de la Madeleine

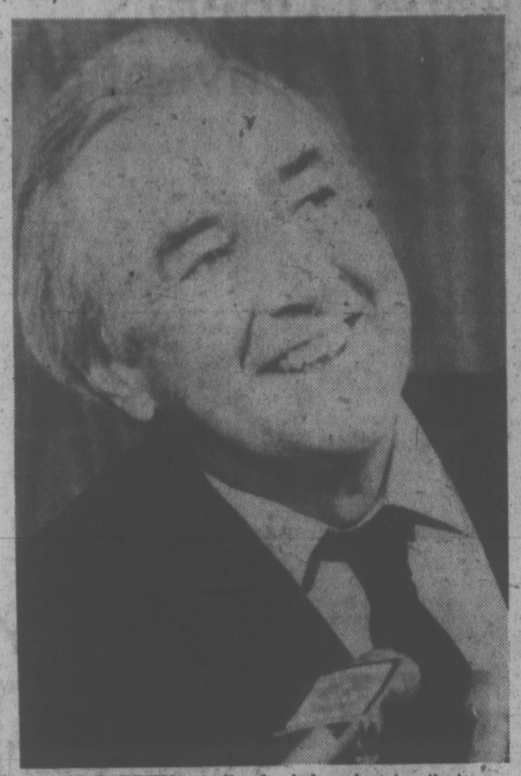

I am writing to various newspapers across Canada in the hopes of making contact with members of the Ship's Company who sailed in the Canadian Navy frigate HMCS Cape de la Madeleine during the year's 1944-45.

It has been over 30 years since we said our "so longs" and went our separate ways and just maybe there are some who have taken up residence in this area.

I hope to re-establish old friendships by means of a newsletter and if possible, organize a reunion in 1977.

McCARTHY . . . dice loaded against 'spoiler'

Gene McCarthy's Quixotic Campaign

By JOHN PICTON
The Globe and Mail

WASHINGTON — Around the walls of Eugene McCarthy's apartment-office in downtown Washington are relics of bygone years.

There are aging magazines from his presidential campaign of 1968, when he was making the covers of Time, Newsweek and Life. There are leftover buttons from the 1972 campaign — on sale as collectors' items at $4.50 each — that proclaim "Gene Lives."

For this year, nothing.

In 1976, the 60-year-old former U.S. senator is being regarded as a political eccentric, going the way of fellow Minnesotan Harold Stassen and all those other has-beens who cannot shake their dreams of power.

In 1976, this former Democrat — whose strong anti-war backing in 1968 persuaded Lyndon Johnson he should not run for re-election — is appearing as an independent candidate. And he is being bucked by the establishment all the way.

He has no Secret Service protection, as do the Republican and Democratic candidates. As an independent, he is not entitled to any campaign subsidies from the U.S. Treasury, whereas President Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter each get $21.8-million. He is being shut out of the upcoming presidential debates.

"The dice are loaded," McCarthy says. "The two parties are trying to freeze the process, They have formalized the two-party process by law. I can anticipate a time when Democrats and Republicans will be the only ones allowed even to vote in presidential elections, with independents effectively excluded."

His campaign, he says, is a legitimate attempt to attract the 45 per cent of the U.S. electorate who did not vote in the last election, disillusioned voters who are turned off by the two main parties.

But, while that is the main thrust of his campaign, he does have policies to make his presidential bid appear more than just symbolic.

McCarthy advocates reducing the work week to create jobs for the unemployed. He wants to regulate the weight and speed of cars to conserve fuel. And he wants to control inflation by "conditional wage-price controls and by ending wasteful inflationary spending in the automobile industry and in military and space programs."

First, however, he must struggle to get his name entered on state ballots, which is proving difficult because he has a small staff — only five at his national headquarters — and meagre funds (not much more than $200,000 by a recent accounting).

So far, supporters have collected about 500,000 signatures to qualify him on ballot papers and his campaign aides are sure they have succeeded in 25 states.

In seven other states, McCarthy's lawyers think they can overcome laws that exclude independent candidates, have won legal battle in five such states.

Perhaps because of his difficulties, McCarthy's candidacy is being overlooked by the news media. He acknowledges this when he says, with some bitterness: "We deserve at least as much attention as Walter Cronkite gave to the boy he thought for two days had been raised by apes."

In the Washington political community, he is being regarded as a "spoiler" trying to complicate the traditional contest between Democrats and Republicans.

He replies that "if you read the Democratic platform and look at the difference between Carter and Ford, I don't think you're spoiling very much." Since no one expects him to win, however, a spoiler he could be.

Public-opinion polls, taken in July and August, gave McCarthy between 5 and 7 per cent of the national vote which, in a close race, could mean the difference between win and loss for the Democrats, among whose liberal supporters he is expected to get his support.

The margin could be greater in some crucial Northern states.

"Should the race for the White House narrow, as it likely will later on, McCarthy's 5 per cent vote could make a considerable difference," says pollster Lou Harris. "If McCarthy were to get himself on the ballot in states that cast a majority of the electoral votes, Carter would have to be ahead of his Republican opponent by at least 53 to 47 per cent to win."

Some of Jimmy Carter's aides have conceded that the McCarthy campaign could take away enough liberal voters — especially Jews and Catholics — to jeopardize the Democrat's chances.

According to Jerry Eller, McCarthy's campaign manager, it is crucial for the candidate to be on the ballot in six main states: New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois and California. They are the key to winning the minimum 270 electoral votes needed to win the election.

As a "fallback strategy, McCarthy hopes to get enough electoral votes to ensure that neither of the two main parties wins. In that case, the choice would go to the House of Representatives, possibly giving him some bargaining leverage.

Meanwhile, the candidate is faced with problems not so much of identity as of visibility, which have handicapped his fund-raising efforts.

In recent weeks, he has been speaking in empty halls and at deserted ballparks; even in television interviews he leaves the impression no one was watching.

For a "modest" national campaign, McCarthy estimates he will need to raise $1-million. Eller says the campaign could be "very respectably done" for $3-million.

To raise these monies, McCarthy talks vaguely about "doing a couple of Reagan-type things on television." And, despite his expertise, we now know what happened to Reagan.

Who's Getting the Free Rides?

By FRANCES RUSSELL
The Sun

The roaring lions of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce turned into purring pussycats under the blandishments of Transport Minister Jack Davis last week.

And a major reason for the sudden change of heart from the individuals whose businesses have been ravaged by the doubling and tripling of ferry rates was the minister's adroit appeal to their small-c conservative political instincts.

While winning over the chamber — perhaps not that hard a task in the first place given its natural predilection to the government — Mr. Davis dropped a new gem of Socred financial orthodoxy.

Its economically elitist sentiments caused smiles and nods of agreement from the well-heeled crowd. Even warmer applause greeted the minister's skilful mining of their anti-union sentiments.

'Less Involved'

Mr. Davis' financial wisdom popped out in reply to a Victoria alderman's question regarding the legitimacy of sudden ferry rate increases of such magnitude.

Ald. Bob Wright's question was one of only three hostile comments during the entire meeting.

The minister replied that ferry fares had gone up "because if we keep hiding the cost you end up paying for it in your taxes and you won't know what is going on. You're saying that you don't really want to know what is going on. You want it to be free.

"We want to see government less involved. We believe that government should supply certain fundamental services. But if we hide the true cost, it will just make people think things are free and then they will demand more government services."

Mr. Davis has given new meaning to other Socred financial orthodoxies that have been kicking around since the last election. British Columbians are familiar with the fact there's no money tree in the basement of the legislature. That governments have no money of their own. And that the best government is a pay-as-you-go government.

Now, British Columbians learn from Mr. Davis that taxes pay only for hidden things. That a reasonable charge for a government service will encourage people to ask for more government services. And that — and this is the bottom line — if you personally can't afford to pay for something, then you just don't get it.

The tall, angular transport minister bears no physical resemblance to the rotund Mr. Bumble, the beadle who was appalled when Oliver Twist asked for more. Yet he would seem to be his philosophic soul mate. And the government would appear to be as well.

British Columbians should stop and think about those words. If they are taken to their logical conclusion, individuals may be back building their own roads and schools and paying their hospital and doctor bills in full. True, Mr. Davis says the government should supply certain "fundamental" services. But he didn't spell these out. And true, despite all its talk, the government is continuing a small subsidy of the ferry system.

What is most disturbing about the comments is the political attitude they reveal. This government's allegiance is not to the financially pinched or economically oppressed. These people, we learn, either scratch together the money to pay for things like ferry rides or car insurance or they don't get them.

This government's allegiance is to the well off. The people who because of their income pay a relatively larger share of the cost of items financed through taxes than do people who are poor. These people, we learn, are to have their positions protected in not one but three ways.

Not Hidden

They of course can afford user fees. They save on their taxes. And they get a chance to save again because the other members of society will be discouraged from appealing to government for any more "free rides."

Mr. Davis' assertion that things that are financed through taxes are "hidden" is sheer economic nonsense. Where government money goes is published in the budget, departmental estimates and broadcast in the media. It is the subject of political debate and public discussion. And if the government is still concerned, after all this, that the people don't realize the number of tax dollars directed to a certain service, it can repeat the figure from every public platform it occupies.

The right-wing sentiment expressed by the minister matched the glancing blow he delivered to the ferry workers — two of whom bought tickets to the chamber's lunch so they could question him.

Mr. Davis brought a gasp from the smartly dressed group when he stated he wasn't surprised morale was low on the ferries and then went on to give an example. Cooks who had been earning $22,000 or $23,000 a year when the dining rooms were phased out had been bumped down to lower jobs but retained their income because they were "red-circled" through union agreement.

"Why, I saw a Chinese cook directing traffic onto a ferry on Bowen Island," the minister said, to the accompaniment of audible sounds of disgust from the audience.

Mr. Davis didn't say what he would recommend doing to people who lose their jobs due to policy decisions by government. But by his choice of example, it appears his personal preference would be pay cuts, at the very least.

Anti-union sentiment and the concept of a government lacking social and economic responsibility may be in keeping with the right-wing mood of the times.

Why is the government ashamed to state its opinions openly? Oblique references to people earning $22,000 to direct traffic and an attempt to show subsidies as "free" and taxation to be the source of "hidden" expenditures are cowardly traps set for the unwary.

MPs Need Steady Hand on Gun Curbs

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Whenever the right to carry arms is threatened, a loud, long, lingering howl of protest is to be expected, and here it is. Twenty-one gun and wildlife organizations have banded together to form the Canadian Association for Sensible Arms Legislation (CASAL). But its name belies its intent. The chief purpose of the association will be to oppose the gun control provisions of Bill C-83, the federal government's proposed peace and security legislation.

According to L. H. Nicholson, former Commissioner of the RCMP and a spokesman for the group, CASAL will begin is campaign by lobbying members of Parliament. "They are going to be left with the clear impression that if they support the bill they are going to suffer," says Mr. Nicholson. And, in case there is any doubt about CASAL's ability to inflict suffering, he adds that the organization represents between 700,000 and a million people directly and is a voice for the three million firearm owners in Canada — all of whom, no doubt, can aim their ballots as sharply as their bullets.

MPS who tend to be squeamish under fire should pause, before diving for cover, to consider that the throngs of unorganized voters who favor a really sensible approach to gun control far outnumber the misguided gun enthusiasts whom Mr. Nicholson claims to represent. And they can take further comfort in the knowledge that the gun control provisions of Bill C-83 are, as far as they go, thoroughly sensible.

The bill would require people to obtain a licence before they could purchase guns or ammunition; it would make them criminally liable for the safekeeping of their guns, increase penalties for crimes involving the use of firearms, make it more difficult to obtain handguns and other restricted weapons through legal channels and outlaw further private ownership of machine guns.

These are the provisions which CASAL has vowed to oppose. Mr. Nicholson insists that they will have no effect on the criminal use of guns. He is, quite simply, wrong. The proposed legislation will reduce the access of criminal and mentally unstable people to guns. Mr. Nicholson warns of the high cost of operating a gun control program, but he ignores that if the program succeeds in preventing just one wounding or one death, then the cost is more than justified. He says it will place unreasonable restrictions on law-abiding gun owners. That's shallow. If the necessity to obtain a licence before purchasing a firearm is somehow unreasonable, then we can abandon all hope for reason.

In place of the gun control provisions of Bill C-83, Mr. Nicholson has proposed a requirement that gun owners be trained in the responsible use of their weapons and, perhaps, a further requirement that they belong to a recognized gun club. It's sheer flummery, irresponsible nonsense. But Mr. Nicholson and the 21 gun and wildlife organizations represented by CASAL are committed to the battle against gun control.

Dear, dear, dear. All that the government proposes is to place firearms a little further beyond the reach of those who will misuse them. How, by any stretch of logic, can that be opposed? MPs will do us all a great service if they pay only as much heed to CASAL as its arguments deserve. None.

It Takes a Handy Man

russell baker

I painted the cellar windows, and in the process also painted extensive areas of myself and the cellar floor. It was that oil-base paint which takes days to dry, and when I stepped on the floor spatters, the paint attached itself to the soles of my shoes and stayed there until I walked upstairs and painted the living room rug.

There was the usual wailing. I went back to the cellar and started to knock down a partition. The idea was sound. I intended to create a cosy cellar TV room where the cats and I could sit alone to concentrate on the great outer world of the small screen without disruption. Some idiot, of course, had put electrical wiring in that partition. At the third whack of the hammer an electrical arc that would have gratified Dr. Frankenstein danced through my ears and the hammer went crazy and smashed five panes of freshly painted window.

There was nothing left to do but kick the paint can, so I did it and was told I would have to take meals in the cellar for the next four days. A sane voice reasoned with me. "It's time to call in Whiskery Wilt," she said.

Which is why, four days later, I was canvassing guitar society for a clue to his whereabouts. A prodigious lover of women and sunsets, Whiskery Wilt was our chief defence against the astronomical cost of building-trades labor. He had dropped out of Cal Tech in the Abby Hoffman Age to perform honest work with his hands and grow beards, sideburns and mustaches, and to admire sunsets and love women.

He arrived at last, a young giant with a rusting van, three dogs and a dulcimer, and crushed my hand and sat in the yard and played Beethoven's "Apassionata" on the dulcimer. I talked of my dreams. Of sitting alone in a cosy cellar TV room with the cats. Of close communion with Howard Cosell and Merv Griffin. Of subterranean solitude with Barbara Walters and Mary Hartman. He went back to his van and refused to come out for three days except for good sunsets. His zodiac was badly positioned for cellar work, he said.

On the fourth day he announced that he would start work the next evening at high tide, although a woman in Zanesville, Ohio, was pining for his love. What happiness suffused the house that night. In a day or two, the partition would be down and the floor sanded, the wiring restored and all three networks eager to enrich the cats and me at the touch of a switch.

Whiskery Wilt entered the cellar at 8:17 p.m. and came out at 8:17:30 p.m. "Have you had a gorilla working down there?" he demanded. Too stunned for further work, he took his dulcimer to town in search of love.

Next day he took up the floor boards. "Look at this," he said, displaying a handful of loathsome, damp gray matter. It was the beam supporting the floor. "You're getting water from somewhere," said Whiskery Wilt, and he laid about him with a crowbar, ripping several hundred dollars' worth of old oak from the cellar wall.

"Just a little TV room, Whiskery," I told him. He refused to listen. He had too much pride in his work to do a tacky job. In no time he had exposed an eight-foot stretch of red dust. "Know what that is?" he asked. "Brick. All that brick will have to be remortared and treated with a silicone glaze."

"All I want is a cosy little TV room, Whiskery."

He went into a prolonged sulk. He was not a man to give up sunsets and love merely to do a cheap, patchwork job. He retreated to his van and calmed himself with the dulcimer, then left for Olean, N.Y., where a woman was desperately in need of his love.

With promises that he could do the job right, he returned the following week and tore down the ceiling, which he said was a fire hazard. He would replace it with insulation and slabs of sheet rock. All the overhead wiring, of course, would have to be replaced. For that purpose he had asked a friend who was selling fish bait in San Diego — an M.I.T. dropout — to fly to the East Coast the following week prepared for a lucrative electrical job.

Since nothing could proceed until the wiring was finished, he spent the week trimming his mustache and making long-distance calls around the continent to good women who were growing weak for lack of his love. The electrical friend arrived, looked at the fuse boxes and told Whiskery the entire house would have to be rewired and circuit breakers installed. "Just a little TV room, Whiskery," I pleaded.

He ignored it. "Look at this," he said, shaking an overhead pipe until it leaked for mercy. "All the soldering on these pipes is failing," he said. "With this water and your dangerous electrical setup, this cellar could kill you if you don't do it right."

"I'll rewire," I told him. "Sure," he said, "but you also have to replace all this old plumbing with copper." I picked up a handful of the loathsome, damp gray matter, which was now well mixed with brick dust and dumped it in his dulcimer. Whiskery hasn't been back for weeks. He said he wouldn't finish the job until I learned to play "The Indian Love Call" on the banjo. I started banjo lessons the other day and cut my finger with the pick. If things run to form, I'll need an amputation.

Accident Victim Drowned

NELSON (CP) — Dr. Otto Brych, pathologist at Kootenay Lake District Hospital, said Thursday Russell Beattie, 19, of Castlegar, died of drowning.

He said Beattie, who lay dying in a creek for 45 minutes while a dozen bystanders stood and watched, "might have survived if he was taken out of the water" following the auto accident near Crescent Valley Saturday.

"He died first of drowning," Brych said in an interview.

"It was reflex drowning where the person does not actually aspirate water which blocks the breathing but rather the type wich involves suddent exposure to water, especially the type of cold water that was present in this particular case."

Brych said Beattie suffered a small fracture of the skull and internal head injuries as a result of being thrown out of the small sports car.

Constable Sid Breckenridge, first RCMP member on the scene, unsuccessfully applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to Beattie "who was very cold but showed a faint pulse."

"I couldn't believe it," Breckenridge said Monday. "We had to order people to help us with him. Ordinary people around here are pretty good but I don't think too highly of those people who just stood there."

An inquest has been ordered but no date set. The second occupant of the car, Philip Calderbank, 22, also of Castlegar, was in satisfactory condition in Nelson Hospital but was still semi-conscious.

Indian-Police Move To Reduce Tensions

VANCOUVER (CP) — Steps to reduce tension between police and native Indians were decided Thursday at a meeting of representatives of the B.C. Police Commission, native groups and the provincial Human Rights Commission.

Police commission chairman John Hogarth said the meeting showed that "while we have a duty to improve relations, there is a limit to what the police can do."

He said the general opinion of the meeting was that society is copping out if it thinks that police should clean up a problem "that belongs to the whole community."

He cited the problems of alcohol and drug abuse, poverty, inadequate housing and medical services, poor access to schools and unresolved native land claims as some of the problems that the community at large refuses to face.

"Society should stop trying to find a single person to blame for problems that are embedded in attitudes 200 and 300 years old," he said.

Recommendations include:

— Stepping up communications between individual police officers and native Indians, especially in areas of large native population;

— Review training methods at the B.C. Police College here and the RCMP training depot in Regina;

— Familiarize constables new to B.C. with unique native Indian problems;

— Review the complaint mechanism set out in the Police Act which tends to work better for whites than for natives;

— Establish the use of native court workers in assisting municipal police departments and local RCMP detachments to ensure native Indians understand their rights;

— Create a roster of resource people available to all police forces to help police ease tensions where racial problems exist.

Hogarth said similar meetings between natives and police have been scheduled to discuss a province-wide strategy for improving police-native relations.

Three members of the police commission will go to Vanderhoof on Tuesday for a three-day series of meetings in the community to patch up Indian-white relationships there, Hogarth said.

A recent inquest into the traffic death of a pregnant Indian woman there spent considerable time examining the conduct of RCMP in the case.

One of its recommendations was that RCMP interview juveniles in the presence of a parent or guardian.

JOIN LAND PROTEST, NATIVES ASK WHITES

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Native Indians here are asking whites to join them in a provincial day of protest Oct. 12 to emphasize lack of progress in land claims by the Nazko-Kluskus Band.

A spokesman for the band, located about 60 miles northwest of Quesnel, said Thursday the land claims issue will be used by Indians as a focal point for other claims throughout Canada.

The spokesman, who declined to be identified, said that it will be easier for the public to understand native struggles with land claims if one specific example is emphasized.

Band members were meeting in Victoria with government officials about land claims. They also were meeting with Kathleen Ruff, B.C. human rights director, on the same topic.

The band also is planning to stage a peaceful protest Oct. 5 in Quesnel to emphasize its land claims.

Gas Explosion Burns 2 Workers

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — A fire at a natural gas well about 30 miles northwest of here last August was caused by a break in a tubing joint, owners of the well said Thursday.

Norsen Energy of Calgary said a tubing joint deep below the surface parted, causing a natural gas leak that ignited after two days.

The fire began Aug. 25 and raged for three days, burning ten million cubic feet of gas a day until it was extinguished by Texas firefighter Jim Adair.

The well has since been capped, but there are no plans to put it into operation because there are no pipelines in the area, a company spokesman said.

Socreds Vote To Oppose Gun Laws

PENTICTON (CP) — A motion asking the B.C. government to oppose federal gun control legislation and refuse to accept any gun control legislation, which may be passed, was approved Wednesday by the Boundary-Similkameen Social Credit Constituency Association.

The motion suggests that gun controls will not stop criminals from obtaining weapons. It also states that the way to deal with criminals is to treat them as criminals and offer them no sympathy.

The 94 delegates also passed a motion calling on the provincial government to withdraw proposed legislation that would make the use of car seatbelts mandatory in B.C.

The resolution movers referred to American Safety Council reports which suggest that seatbelts are of no value in traffic accidents above 40 miles an hour.

Splintered Liberals Stage 3-Day Convention

KAMLOOPS (CP) — B.C. Liberal Party members begin their three-day annual convention today with their political health at its lowest ebb since 1952 when the Social Credit government of W. A. C. Bennett ended 12 years of Liberal-Conservative coalition government.

It is the first major gathering of provincial Liberals since Gordon Gibson was elected party leader by acclamation at last year's convention.

Facing the new leader are the pieces of a party organization badly splintered by internal strife and dissention. David Anderson, then 38, a boyishly handsome bachelor and former MP, stepped aside a year ago after sharp public criticism from important party figures.

Former Liberals Garde Gardom, Allan Williams and Pat McGeer had left the party to sit as independents and were consulting with then opposition leader Bill Bennett.

Now all three wandering Liberals are Social Credit cabinet ministers and Gibson is the sole Liberal facing the government. Beside him is Scott Wallace, sole member of the legislature for the Progressive Conservatives and that party's leader.

The Libeals took only 7.2 per cent of the popular vote in the Dec. 11 election that swept the New Democratic Party of Dave Barrett out and established the government of the son of former Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

Gibson said Liberals must now concentrate on "ideology and character, because that is what we have to sell."

Council Hikes Pay

BURNABY (CP) — Burnaby council has voted to prepare a bylaw increasing council salaries by six per cent effective Jan. 1. Mayor Tom Constable said six per cent was all council would receive because municipal employees are being asked to accept six-per-cent raises.

He said the people of B.C. have heard enough criticism of the NDP and are not yet ready to hear complaints about Social Credit.

"People are not yet ready to listen to extensive criticism of Social Credit, feeling that they deserve a chance to show their stuff, and feeling as well — very correctly — that they won't get a chance for a shot at them for about three years and in the meantime they're the only government we have," Gibson said.

"At the same time, they aren't interested in a lot of criticism of the NDP," having dealth with the NDP in the election.

He concludes that the public fight with the government will have to be a low key attempt at "keeping them honest and suggesting useful ideas."

Holy War by a Dam Site, B.C. Residents Warn

TAYLOR (CP) — There will be "holy war" if Alberta advances plans for a Peace River dam at Dunvegan, Alta., backing up water into northeastern British Columbia, B.C. residents say.

The planning commission of the Peace River Liard regional district rejected B.C. Hydro's "Site C" dam near Taylor this week.

Dietger Hollmann, planning director, said the commission will likely take a simiar stand on a dam in northwestern Alberta backing up water into B.C.

"I'm sure our commission would be opposed to any further flooding of our valley bottom land here," he said. "it doesn't make any difference which group does it."

Gwen Johannson of Hudson Hope, secretary of the Peace River Environmental Association, said there would be "holy war" over such a dam.

The Alberta government and Calgary Power Ltd. are studying three proposals of a dam at Dunvegan, two of which back up water into B.C.

A high dam with a capacity of 3,000 megawatts would back up water 165 miles to Hudson Hope, flooding out Site C and B.C. Hydro's proposed Site E dam near the B.C. border.

A medium dam with 1,800 megawatts capacity would back water 115 miles to Taylor, also drowning out Site E.

A low dam with 1,000 megawatts capacity would back up water 79 miles to the B.C. border.

The Alberta government is spending $2.25 million on feasibility studies with a final report to go to Environment Minister Dave Russell in December.

If B.C. residents block further damming of the Peace River west of the border, Alberta will be limited to an expensive 1,000-megawatt dam which couldn't deliver power before 1985.

It is believed the low dam would affect very little agricultural land since the Peace River runs in a steep-walled valley east of the B.C. border.

But Mrs. Johannson said that west of the border the valley flattens with bottom land that is not only very fertile but has a "micro-climate" favorable to market gardening.

Ray Brooks of Taylor, association president, said there is about 12,000 acres of developed and potentially arable land between Taylor and the Alberta border.

Hospital Pays Tax Under Protest

TERRACE (CP) — In what has become a dispute between the municipality and the provincial government, Mills Memorial Hospital in Terrace has paid under protest more than $7,000 in back taxes owed to the Terrace district.

For three years, the board has not paid taxes on approximately six acres of undeveloped property adjacent to the hospital purchased in 1957.

The land, including the site of a $6 million hospital wing under construction, was due to be put up for auction at the Terrace municipal tax sale Thursday.

Board chairman Vic Jolliffe said in an interview the provincial government has refused to include tax payments in the hospital's budget, although the board has been requesting it since 1973 when the property was first taxed.

Man Arrested After Woman's Death

CLINTON (CP) — One man was in custody Thursday following the death of a woman Wednesday night. RCMP said the cause of the death was not known and an investigation was under way. No names were released.

Farm Workers Asking for Mediator

PENTICTON (CP) — Local 1572 of the British Columbia Fruit and Vegetable Workers Union asked for a mediator Thursday in negotiations between the union and Okanagan Federated Shippers. Five meetings have been held in efforts to negotiate a new contract for the 1,900 employees.

Assault Trial Set in Kamloops

Paul Bianco was committed to stand trial Oct. 8 following an appearance in provincial court Thursday on charges of assault causing bodily harm in connection with a Sept. 4 incident involving a local man, John Fosty. Bianco pleaded not guilty to the charges.

Sea Water Cuts Skeena Fishing

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Cold water moving up from lower levels of the sea and the density of salt in the water were to blame for this year's poor fishing season on the Skeena River, according to a report written by Percy Wicket, biological oceanographer for the federal biological station in Nanaimo.

Charge Laid After Hunter Shot

LYTTON (CP) — William John Gibson, 30, of Richmond has been charged with dangerous use of a firearm in connection with the shooting last week of 34-year-old Ronald McKee of New Westminster. Gibson will appear in Lytton provincial court Oct. 14. McKee suffered a bullet wound to his right arm last Thursday after he and Gibson became separated while hunting big game about 10 miles northeast of Lytton.

Fast Gov't Action Sought For Sagging Shipbuilding

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Shipbuilding and Ship Repairing Association issued a statement Thursday calling for the federal government to move at once to support the faltering Canadian shipbuilding industry.

The statement, which reiterates and expands requests made last April, was issued by executive members of the association following a day-long meeting here.

At a news conference after the meeting, spokesmen said a healthy shipbuilding industry employs more than 13,000 workers, but there are 10,000 jobs at present and reductions have taken place in associated industries, which usually employ about 40,000 workers.

The spokesmen said the situation in British Columbia is considerably worse, with about half the work force of 4,000 idle.

The association called on the governmet to initiate the following measures:

—The immediate placing of orders for coast guard and fisheries fleet requirements, especially search and rescue vessles, Polar 7 icebreakers and support vessels;

—The placing of orders with Canadian shipyards for ferries as soon as possible to replace those being leased offshore;

—The acceleration of Canadian Forces destroyer replacement plans;

—The allowing of ship conversions to be eligible for subsidy under the Shipbuilding Industry Assistance Program (SIAP);

—The maintenance of the SIAP program at the 1976 levels;

—The increasing of Fisheries Improvement Loan Act guarantees to a $500,000 ceiling from one of $50,000.

—The implementation without further delay of west coast and east coast drydock plans;

—The abandonment of the change in the capital cost allowances on the leasing of ships and the addition of new financial incentives for ship construction in the form of long-term, low-interest guaranteed loans.

No Shortage Of Girls —Detective

VANCOUVER (CP) — Undercover police agent George Barclay told the Penthouse prostitution trial Thursday there were so many girls at the cabaret that "they were sometimes hard to keep track of."

Det. Barclay made the statement at the trial of Joseph Philliponi, Ross Filippone, Domenick Filippone, Minerva Kelly, Rose Filippone and Jan Sedlak, who, along the Celebrity Enterprises Ltd., are accused of conspiring to live off the avails of prostitution and conspiring to produce public mischief with intent to corrupt public morals.

Police agents have testified during the four-week trial that suspected prostitutes outnumbered the male patrons.

SFU Drops Faculty Charges

BURNABY (CP) — Simon Fraser University has dropped all charges against the seven faculty members it fired in 1971 for breaking their contracts.

The university's action, announced in letters mailed this week to the seven, doesn't mean they will be offered faculty positions at the university.

"I don't think this is clear cut in this particular issue," said Dennis Roberts, university information officer, when asked if the letters meant the seven could seek reinstatement.

The dropping of charges against the seven had been requested by the Canadian Association of University Teachers (CAUT) which had censured the university because of the firings.

A tentative agreement with the academic freedom and tenure committee of the CAUT was reached on the censure matter last year. One of the terms of that agreement was that all charges against the seven be dropped.

The agreement failed to get past the CAUT council, however.

The seven were fired following a faculty strike in the political science, sociology and anthropology department. The strike came after months of student demonstrations and occupations of administrative offices on the campus in 1968 and 1969.

Mt. Baker Being Watched

A watch is still being kept on Washington State's volcanic Mount Baker, Stephen Malone of the University of Washington said Thursday.

The mountain came to life in March, 1975, when clouds of steam poured from its south slope, he told the Pacific Northwest regional meeting of the American Geophysical Union at the University of Victoria.

Although the volcanic activity has since subsided, Mount Baker is being monitored in an attempt to determine why it flared.

Photographs are periodically taken from the air and ground to document the continuing melting of the crater's snow and ice, he said. Six permanent seismic stations have been operating on and around the mountain since last summer for micro earthquake detection. Sample of gas and water temperatures are also taken.

"I think the increase in activity in 1975 was a one-shot affair," he said. "There was a surge and that was it."

Malone said there are no volcanic mountains on Vancouver Island but several in the Cascades.

"Some could erupt in time," he said. "But so far there are no signs of renewed activity."

More than 145 scientists from British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, Alaska, Saskatchewan and Idaho are attending the meeting.

Papers were presented on earthquake research projects and the water resources of the lower Fraser River and Arctic oceanography.

Other topics discussed included seismology, geomagnetism, meteorology, and problems in water resources and applied hydrology.

Dr. R. W. Stewart, director general of the Institute of Ocean Sciences in Victoria, was guest speaker at a banquet Thursday at the Empress.

Canadians Approve EEC Links

OTTAWA (UPI) — Closer links are favored between Canada and the European Economic Community by 86 per cent of Canadians surveyed in a recent study conducted under the auspices of the department of external affairs and the Commission of European Communities.

The study's release Thursday coincided with today's start of an agreeent signed in Ottawa July 6 for economic and commercial co-operation between the EEC and Canada.

"Canadians are quite realistic and clear-headed in their appreciation of international relations and . . . they tend to think about them in terms of Canadian economic realities," said the study which was conducted in May and June in 23 large urban centres.

The study, performed by the University of Montreal, showed 86 percent of 1,443 persons polled favored the closer Canadian-EEC links, although it noted that many of those polled lacked detailed knowledge of the structure and workings of the nine-member EEC.

As a result of the July 6 agreement, Canada and the EEC are now in a position to convene a joint co-operation committee which, according to the department of external affairs, is expected to meet before the end of the year.

More than 40 per cent of those polled thought the Canada-EEC agreement would benefit both sides equally, while about 30 per cent thought the agreement would have a net advantage for Canada.

The survey also showed that 70 per cent of those polled wished to see Canada extend its contacts with the Far East, especially Japan and the People's Republic of China. The survey also showed a large majority favored closer links with the socialist countries, the U.S.S.R. and Latin America.

Microwave Ovens Burn Painlessly Under Skin

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — People may receive painless burns from microwave ovens without knowing it because the radiation sears fat and muscle deep beneath the skin surface, says Dr. A. M. Muc, engineer with the occupational-health protection branch of the Ontario health ministry.

Muc said in an interview Thursday that burning occurs without pain because most of the pain sensors are on the skin's surface.

Owners of microwave ovens should have them tested immediately if damage is suspected, he said. Cracks in the glass or leaks in the door might allow dangerous electromagnetic radiation to seep out.

Muc said microwave radiation from ovens is impossible to detect without sophisticated equipment. Microwaves are also absorbed by water, which makes up a large part of the human body, he said.

Microwave ovens are the most highly-regulated domestic devices in existence and must conform to federally accepted standards of leakage.

There are some problems with servicing the ovens, however, since some firms do not train technicians well.

EMPLOYEES RILED AT RENTS

FORT McMURRAY, Alta. (CP) — Some employees at the airport here say they are considering quitting or transferring out of this northeast Alberta town because of rent increases.

They said increases announced recently range from 71 to 362 per cent, with the biggest percentage increase raising the rent on a mobile home shared by three men to $331 a month from $90.

The workers said new rents on federal housing, effective Jan. 1, are 'a blow to the morale of the workers, already feeling the pinch of Anti-Inflation Board wage controls.

The proposed increases are due under new federal government rental rates on crown-owned houses, applying to 10 homes near the airport and another two in town.

Provincial rent control regulations limiting increases to 10 per cent a year do not apply to the new federal rents.

The workers, most of them members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, say they are so upset with pending increases that some are considering joining the Canadian Labor Congress day of protest Oct. 14.

Coal Power Next For Alberta

EDMONTON (CP) — Nuclear power plants will likely be built in Alberta prior to any more hydro-electric development, Keith Provost, vice-president planning for Alberta Power Ltd., said Thursday.

The first nuclear plants will not likely come into operation in Alberta until the late 1990s, he told the Association of Professional Engineers, Geologists and Geophysicists of Alberta.

The main source of additional electric power for the next 20 years will be thermal power plants, burning coal, Provost said.

Alberta does have several sites for hydro-electric power development, but all of these sites require overcoming special and very costly technical problems, he said.

Provost was recently named chairman of the electric utility planning council steering committee.

The three major electric utilities — Alberta Power Ltd., Calgary Power Ltd., and the city-owned Edmonton Power and Alberta's major cities — make up the council.

Pulp Firms Query Probe of Files

MONTREAL (CP) — An nation-wide investigation into Canada's pulp and paper industry which began when investigators swooped down on corporate offices to examine documents has left the industry guessing.

The investigation, by agents of the combines investigations branch of the federal consumer and corporate affairs department, began Monday, but only came to light Thursday.

Early Monday investigators arrived at the Montreal offices of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd. and Domtar, Ltd. In Vancouver, they entered the offices of MacMillan Bloedel and Crown Zellerbach.

A Consolidated-Bathurst spokesman said the investigators were "flipping through the files."

"I asked what they're looking for, but they are not saying," she said.

In Ottawa Robert Bertrand, deputy director of the investigation branch, released a statement saying only, "When we do conduct an inquiry, the policy of the director is neither to confirm nor deny it."

A Domtar executive said investigators walked in with a formal order giving them the right to examine documents and taking them away for a maximum of 40 days. "It's to keep the public happy," he said.

The combines investigation branch deals with monopolistic business practices such as price-fixing, take-overs and mergers.

The Domtar executive speculated the investigation may be a "result of the Abitibi-Consolidated offer for Price" 1¼ years ago.

Both companies had bids on the shares of The Price Co Ltd. and Abitibi Paper Co.'s offer was accepted, making the company North America's largest newsprint producer.

A spokesman for the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, said the investigators were "looking at our statistical records."

"I think it is connected with the paper business in Canada," he added. "We have given them our co-operation."

In Vancouver, MacMillan Bloedel president Ernest Richardson said no documents had been seized and that it was a routine investigation.

Tom Rust, Crown Zellerbach president, said he can give no reason for the investigation.

One industry spokesman who asked not to be named said he wonders if the investigation is not politically motivated.

Rare Animal Import Curb Eyed

EDMONTON (CP) — A bill that would specify who could import exotic animals into Canada was unveiled Thursday by the executive vice-president of the Ontario Humane Society.

Tom Hughes told the annual meeting of the Canadian Federation of Humane Societies only qualified people would be allowed to import the animals.

"Our primary concern is the retail pet trade doesn't understand the care, housing ans management of exotic animals and can't pass the proper information on to its customers," he said.

Current legislation restricts the importing of endangered species or animals with disease, but does not say who can go into the animal importing business.

Hughes said his proposed Exotic Animals Act would specify three categories of agencies and individuals who would be allowed to be engaged in the animal import business.

Those exempt would be:

—Authorized zookeepers or persons employed by a zoological park recognized and approved by the Canadian Association of Zoological Parks and Aquaria;

—Persons authorized on behalf of a supply or research facility, laboratory or university which is regularly inspected and approved by the Canadian council for Animal Care;

—Those persons whose "premises and purposes" in having exotic animals "are restricted to the breeding of endangered species or potentially endangered species" and whose "sole aim in doing so is the conservation of the species, and whose promises are approved in writing by the minister of agriculture."

The bill said individuals not exempt from the legislation who were found to be importing exotic animals into Canada could be liable to pay fines ranging from $200 to $1,000 or six months imprisonment or both upon first conviction.

JOBLESS YOUTH 'PHANTOM ARMY'

EDMONTON (CP) — A national organization wants to know why Canada's youths are asking for spare change on the nation's street corners.

The Canadian Council on Social Development will hold a conference in Ottawa later this year to find out why the under-25 age group has twice the unemployment rate of other Canadians.

Reuben Baetz, executive director of the council, said in an interview Thursday that 400,000 young people in this country are not classified as either unemployed, working, or in school.

"It makes me wonder what they are doing," he said. "I call them the phantom army. Obviously some are just travelling or thinking about their futures. But I think the problem is much more serious than that."

He said many cannot find employment and many are under-employed "like the PhD driving the cab."

Reuben said one aspect of the problem that will be looked at during the conference is career counselling by educators.

"Maybe career counselling shouldn't belong in the schools," he said.

"There may be a built in bias on the part of educators involved in counseling to encourage people to stay in school — to get the best possible education they can."

Swine Vaccine OK for Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Results of tests on more than 500 persons show it is safe to go ahead with a mass inoculation program to prevent swine flu, says a spokesman for Connaught Laboratories Ltd., Toronto, maker of the vaccine.

The tests indicate there would be adverse side effects in less than three per cent of the population, he said in an interview.

The vaccine has a limited shelf life, however, and probably would be ineffective by late winter, the spokesman said.

Ontario is committed to buying $11.6 million worth of the vaccine but has not yet decided whether to carry out the immunizations. A health ministry spokesman said the province is awaiting word from the National Advisory Committee on Immunization Agents for indications of whether an epidemic is likely.

The ministry said last week that it has dropped an earlier program to vaccinate all persons over 20. The plan now is to inoculate those over 65 and the chronically ill.

CUT RATE FARE TO EUROPE

MONTREAL (UPI) — Beginning November 29 it will be possible to travel to France and Germany on less expensive charter class flights, Air Canada announced Wednesday.

A spokesman for the airline said the charter class flights have previously been available only to the United Kingdom.

As an example of the new charter class fares, the return fare between Montreal and Paris will be $309 compared to the regular economy fare of $642. The fare between Toronto and Frankfurt will be $399 compared to the present economy round trip of $744.

The fares to France and Germany are based on minimum and maximum stay requirements of 22 days and 45 days. Requirements to the U.K. are 14 and 45 days.

All reservations must be made two months before the travel date with a minimum deposit of $50, with the balance paid in full 45 days before departure. There is also a cancellation penalty.

The fares have yet to be approved by the government.

UBC Naval Design School Will Boost Ship-Building

The creation of Canada's first professional school of naval architecture at the University of B.C. will give the Canadian ship-building industry the muscle and expertise it badly needs, John Case said Thursday.

Case, who heads the Victoria company of Case Existological Laboratories Ltd., is chairman of the finance committee for the UBC project.

As the first step toward creating the school, courses in naval architecture and marine engineering will be offered as fourth year options.

Case said marine industrial companies from as far away as Montreal have shown enthusiasm for the project, backing that up with pledges of financing.

The industry will donate $13,000 each year for a three-year-period, the federal government will contribute $12,000 each year for the same period and the provincial government, $10,000 each year.

"I'm real excited. We've been working on this for about five years," Case said.

A research professor is to be hired immediately to develop co-ordinate, and propose new courses. UBC is advertising for a professionally-trained naval architect.

A $1.7 million towing tank and manoeuvring basin has been constructed on the campus with financing from the two senior governments.

Case said part of the financing will be used for research at the ocean engineering centre.

"It's a long-term program but we will be offering the first full degrees in naval architecture in Canada," Case said. "We have an enormous coastline but we don't have the internal technology to handle it."

Graduating our own naval architects will beef up the Canadian ship industry, Case said, producing "bright young minds" that won't sit around waiting for government handouts.

"Up to now we've had to import our expertise," Case said. "I'm from the United States and most of the people working for me are from the U.K. We will be flushing people out into the ship industry who will know how to cope with Canadian problems, such as ice.

"They will know the problems and come up with the solutions. They won't sit around waiting for the bloody government. They'll figure it out for themselves and generate the money."

Cereal Crops Show Drop

LUXEMBOURG (Reuter) — Cereal crops in the nine European Economic Community (EEC) countries this year are estimated at 90.9 million tons, a drop of 6.5 per cent from last year's harvest and the lowest since 1970, the EEC statistical office said. It said the poor harvest is the result of a prolonged drought on the Continent.

MIGHTY MITE CHEWS

of the dormant state, spread the acid on the surface. As the acid softens the resin, small amounts are gouged out and conveyed to the creature's mouths, one for each of the six chisel-shaped front feet.

The loss of bottom paint in small patches, followed by minute depressions, cracks or blisters in the gelcoat are the first signs of a polyestermite attack.

As well as fibreglass hulls, the styrenic acid eats a numer of plasties. Styrofoam mooring buoys and dock floatations are particularly vulnerable.

Manufacturers of bottom paint have found that a ship's bottom fouled by other marine organisms can resist attack by the polyestermite. Unofficially, according to Sail, some bottom paints have been produced that encourage the rapid growth of less destructive organisms.

One bottom paint manufacturer has produced radioactive paint in an effort to discourage polyestermites. It causes the cilia on the creature's antenna to fall out. Without the cilia, a former researcher with the paint company explains, the female mite confuses the male and mating drops by 50 per cent.

B.C. Marina Trade Floating South

exchange rate on the dollar. They think British Columbia prices are too high generally."

The fishing licence applies to Americans only and ranges from $25 to $75, depending upon the size of the boat. The Seattle Yacht Club and other U.S. organizations have urged a boycott of Canadian waters until the licence is removed.

Lambrecht said business was so slow this summer that he and his wife could handle all the work themselves, marina, cafe and trailer court, although they had to put in long hours.

Camper trade was down 75 per cent. Last summer there were 28 trailers or campers per day, this summer it was down to seven.

As many as 60 cars with U.S. licence plates would be in during a typical summer day last year for food or to rent a boat. This year it was almost nil, he said.

The marina, on the water 10 miles from Duncan, would continue but unless ferry rates were reduced and the fishing licence system abandoned, the future looked grim.

"On top of that we had to accept U.S. dollars at par and this cost us as well. This summer was a disaster."

Further up-Island, marinas report revenues were down from 50 per cent to 70 per cent from last year.

The small Canadian Gulf Island marinas were also in difficulties, except those run as sidelines by gasoline dealers.

Oak Bay Marina President Bob Wright said his company has received inquiries from several Gulf Island marina owners who want to sell their businesses.

"We were not interested," he said.

"Their season is really only two months long and they have many expenses on a year-around basis ... insurance, depreciation, key employees."

In addition, he said, foreshore rent charged by the provincial government is up about 300 per cent.

His own company had a good season at Pedder Bay, which did well because fishing was unusually good. At Oak Bay, business was about average. The Oak Bay Marina caters mainly to local residents and was not affected by the decline in U.S. visitors.

Wright was concerned about a proposal to end the $25 boat licence and replace it with licence on individual fishermen.

The effect would be a charge of $5 for Canadians and $25 for Americans every time they go on a fishing trip.

The charge was reasonable for those who might be fishing for several weeks but the majority of Americans only go fishing for one day and the $25 charge would keep them in American waters.

"This type of policy could push a few more marinas into receivership," he said.

At Ganges, Shelby' Ganges Marina showed a decline in U.S. traffic but the marina was supported by gasoline sales to local residents. Alex Shelby is the Gulf Oil dealer for the area.

Marinas could not prosper in the Gulf Islands until the season was extended beyond the summer months. A breakwater is needed near Ganges to make the Salt Spring Island area a major boating centre, he said.

Mayne Island Service and Marina had a fairly good season, thanks to higher gasoline revenues. Owner John Dodds has the Imperial Oil dealership. The marina in Active Pass caters to mainly Vancouver boats.

The number of small boats was down but there was a slight increase in larger boats. The marina is the first refueling stop for boats coming from the mainland.

Explosion Kills Alaska Woman

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — An Anchorage woman died in a parking lot explosion Thursday that shattered windows in nearby homes and scattered debris 200 feet from the vehicle she apparently tried to start.

Police said the downtown blast apparently was caused by an explosive device planted in the vehicle.

Police declined to identify the victim, but an employee of a nearby travel service identified the body as that of Muriel Pfeil, owner of the business and longtime Alaska resident.

Coal Firm's Past Made Public

A private collection of papers, documents and photographs dealing with B.C.'s coalmining industry has been donated to the province by a mining engineer.

The collection of Dr. Alex Fraser Buckham of Victoria sheds new light on the Dunsmuir family, founders of a 19th century coal mining empire, as well as on the social and mining history of the province, according to Daniel Gallacher, curator of history at the Provincial Museum.

Included are photographs of all the coal mines on Vancouver Island and other aspects of the industry, plus the business records of Canadian Collieries (Dunsmuir) Ltd, of Cumberland, which closed its mining operations in 1960.

The collection, first donated to the museum, has been turned over to the provincial archives.

Kent Howarth, archivist in the manuscript and document division, said the Canadian Collieries papers would have been lost but for Buckham who was aware of their historical significance.

When mining operations ended on the island, the company planned to burn the documents or throw them down a shaft, but Buckham requested them, Howarth said.

"This is the sort of material we like to get," he said. "It's the largest private collection of papers we have ever received and will tell us much about the production of coal, the equipment used and the miners."

Buckham, 62, is one of Canada's leading authorities on Western Canada coal resources. In 1949 he became chief geologist for Canadian Collieries, a position he held until 1960 when the company ceased operation.

Later, he worked for the B.C. government as adviser for the restoration of the historic gold mining town of Barkerville.

He was born and educated in Edmonton.

Mr. Justice J.G. Ruttan Transferring to Victoria

Victoria will have a new resident B.C. Supreme Court judge within a few months.

Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Supreme Court announced Thursday that Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan, formerly of Victoria, will take up the position around the beginning of the year.

The announcement was made at the annual dinner given by the Victoria Bar Association for the chief justice.

Ruttan will succeed Mr. Justice R. A. Wooton who retired earlier this year.

Ruttan was a Victoria lawyer prior to his Supreme Court appointment in 1956. He was then, at age 43, the youngest member of the court.

He was admitted to the bar in 1937 and was a member of the firm of Straith, Ruttan and Davidson. He was a vice-president of the Greater Victoria Arts Centre, vice-president of the Family and Childrens' Service, president of the Victoria Bar Association and a member of Oak Bay council.

GAS LEAK LED TO WELL FIRE

GOODWATER, Sask. (CP) — David Lattery and Russell Brian Casler, both of Estevan, Sask., are in critical condition in Regina General Hospital after being burned in an explosion and fire at the Pan-Canadian Chemical building here.

The two men were working in the building.

A fire department spokesman said the incident may have been caused by an accumulation of natural gas.

Goodwater is 75 miles southeast of Regina.

Bennett Tax Plan 'Gift to the Rich'

The removal of succession and estate duties hinted by the provincial government is a "gift to the rich", Opposition leader Dave Barrett said Thursday.

Premier Bill Bennett told the Kelowna Chamber of Commerce Wednesday the government's commitment to change the succession duties is total and said the taxes discourage investments by Canadians in Canada.

Barrett said the taxes bring in $25 million a year in revenue to the province which comes mainly from the rich and benefits the ordinary taxpayer.

Bennett said earlier that B.C. residents are often forced to sell family farms or small businesses to meet estate and succession duties, but Barrett said he had never heard of anyone in that situation.

He said the NDP had made special provisions for farms or small businesses passed on from one member of a family to another by allowing 10 years to pay the succession duties.

"This is just the same millionaires' government doing things for millionaires," Barrett charged.

Changes to the succession and estate duties cannot be made until the provincial budget is brought in next spring.

Hope Is Gone for Oil Self-Sufficiency—Expert

CALGARY (CP) — Canada cannot expect development of the Athabasca oil sands to make up for an acute shortag of conventional oil supplies in this century, according to Peter Benn, manager of the Petroleum Recovery Institute.

Emphasizing that his opinions on oil sands production are his own and not those of the institute, Benn said time has run out for hopes of imminent self-sufficiency.

"It's too late for the tar sands to solve our sufficiency problems even if we start building extraction plants right now," he told a business meeting.

He said the economics of oil sands development has changed so drastically in the last three years that it is questionable whether even the biggest oil companies are prepared to proceed with oil sands development.

Benn estimated the best the country can hope from the oil sands production by the end of the century is about one million barrels a day.

He said there could be nine extraction plants operating in the oil sands by the end of the century, but added such rates of return are not worth gambling billions of dollars.

GIANT VALVE weighing 16 tons is readied for Trans-Alaska pipeline, the last of 54 such units manufactured in Missouri City, Tex. The 48-inch check valve is made of special alloys to ensure transmission of crude oil from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez in below-zero Arctic conditions.

Firms Join In Gas Production

EDMONTON (CP) — Fifteen oil companies headed by Ashland Oil Canada Ltd. have brought a low-pressure gas deposit into production in the Saddle Lake area about 80 miles northeast of Edmonton, a spokesman said Thursday.

Vernon Vansan, Ashland Canada president, said the production and gas-compressor facility has a capacity of 47 million cubic feet a day.

The 15 companies jointly financed the $5-million cost of pipeline and compressor equipment and spent more than $5 million on lease acquisition and drilling of 35 gas wells.

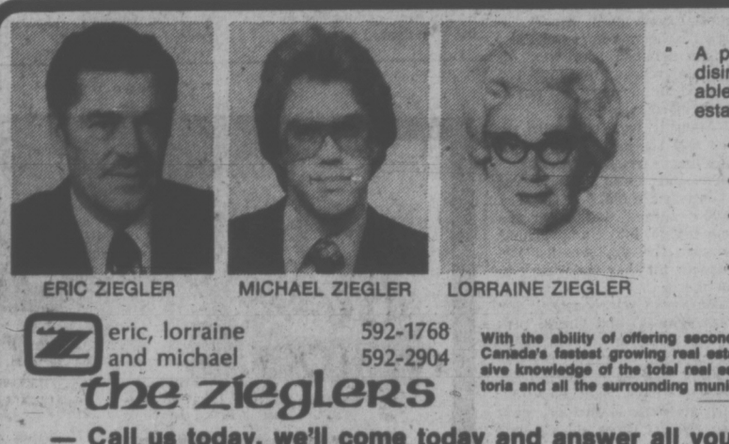

The deposit was recognized for many years, but it was at low pressure and had to be compressed to pressures of 1,200 pounds a square inch before it could be delivered into the transmission pipeline, said Vansan, who added that the cost could not be justified until Alberta's gas prices were high enough.

Feared Suicide Try By Theresa—Doctor

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Dr. Diane Grant told B.C. Supreme Court Thursday she was concerned Theresa Anne Worth might kill herself and that is why she signed a paper committing her to Eric Martin Institute.

"I felt she was a danger to herself and should be institutionalized," said Dr. Grant, who testified she became Miss Worth's family doctor at the request of the woman's parents Oct. 24, 1973, the day after she was admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital following an overdose of sleeping pills.

Miss Worth was paralysed in both legs after leaping from the second floor roof garden of Eric Martin Institute, the psychiatric wing of Royal Jubilee Hospital, Nov. 2, 1973, when she was 23.

She is suing the hospital, psychiatrist Dr. Alexander Stewart, general practitioner Dr. Grant and EMI nurse Peggy Gallimore for damages, alleging negligence.

Dr. Grant said Miss Worth first saw her Oct. 22, 1973. She was a patient of Dr. A. R. Cumming, with whom she shared offices.

She complained of sleeplessness and was upset about losing her job and requested a sleeping pill, placidyl.

Dr. Grant said she did not give a prescription for placidyl but did prescribe 10 pills of valmid which she described as a "very mild" sleeping pill.

The next day, she said Mrs. Worth, the woman's mother, phoned and said Miss Worth had been "double-doctoring" and asked that nothing further be prescribed and "I agreed and made a note."

On Oct. 24, Dr. Grant said she got a phone call from Miss Worth saying nurses at Royal Jubilee would not let her out for their appointment.

Dr. Grant said Miss Worth "seemed very upset" and she phoned the hospital and was told she had been admitted for an overdose of placidyl.

Later that day, Dr. Grant said, Mrs. Worth asked her to become her daughter's GP.

"Mrs. Worth asked me what I'd do with Terry and I said if she was my patient I'd have her committed to Eric Martin Institute and I would obtain a psychiatric consultation.

"One of my concerns was possibly Terry might again attempt to overdose on placidyl and might, in fact, kill herself. I was fearful for Theresa's life," she testified.

She said she consulted Dr. Stewart and told him "I was signing my part of the committal papers for Eric Martin Institute."

She went to the hospital and recalled telling Miss Worth that Dr. Stewart would be coming to see her and filling in a pink sheet that GPs sign when requesting a consultation from a specialist, in this case Dr. Stewart.

She said she next saw Miss Worth Oct. 28 but couldn't recall what was said. She saw her again Oct. 31 with Dr. Stewart, who was trying to encourage her to "express some of her feelings." She believed Miss Worth brought up the matter of electric-shock treatment but she couldn't recall if any decision was made.

She also saw her mid-morning Nov. 2 in her room where a nurse was present and they were discussing whether she would go to group therapy.

Dr. Grant denied that Miss Worth asked for a discharge from EMI and denied that Miss Worth said she would attempt to leave.

Dr. Grant was to continue giving her evidence this morning, the fifth day of the trial, which is expected to last into next week.

Miss Worth, meanwhile, completed her cross-examination Thursday, spending a total of almost two days in the witness box.

She said she started taking placidyl when she was 17 but the overdose which brought her to Royal Jubilee was "the only time in my life I overdosed." She said it was accidental.

She said she got placidyl prescriptions from Dr. Cumming but "couldn't hazard a guess" how many times she saw Dr. Grant before Oct. 22.

She believed she was on "primal scream therapy" but agreed Dr. Stewart never used the term.

When it was suggested to her that she agreed to enter a "feelings release therapy" she said, "that was never mentioned to me, no."

She agreed that after she wandered into a "primal scream therapy" session Dr. Stewart told her she wasn't to be there.

Harvey Grey, counsel for Drs. Stewart and Grant, presented her with seven notations from nursing records stating she was asleep at various times. She denied all the sleeping assertions, saying several times she thought nurses assumed she was sleeping when she was just "playing possum."

Grey asserted that at no time did she tell Dr. Stewart she wanted to be discharged, but she vigorously denied this, saying she was "consistently" talking of discharge and wrote Dr. Stewart a letter.

But other than the letter, said Grey, "you never said to him I want to be discharged." She replied "no."

She also replied "no" when he said she did not at any time "say" she wanted to discontinue her treatment program.

And you didn't tell Dr. Grant you wanted a discharge and an end to the program?

"I believe . . . I do remember saying I want to get out of here. She said everyone gets out of here sometime."

Grey said she could have left the hospital Nov. 2 by taking the elevator to the basement and leaving by an unlocked door, as she did once before when she had a pass, rather than her route via the roof garden.

"I realize that now," she replied.

She also said she believed the roof garden was on the first floor.

She denied trying to commit suicide by jumping from the roof garden, earlier said to be 29 feet from the ground.

Asked if what she did was a sudden impulse that day, she said "yes it was."

Cross-examined by Ken Murphy, representing Royal Jubilee and nurse Gallimore, she said it appears from nursing notes that she was put on an isolation program before an incident involving her making marks on her neck but it didn't appear that way at the time.

Murphy told her that nurses at the time quoted her as saying she wanted to die.

Delays Protested By Accused

Delays in laying a fraud charge and the eventual publicity which accompanied laying the charge against James Swan, 53, of 3629 Shelbourne, were protested Thursday in Victoria provincial court.

C. W. Vause, counsel for Swan, was turned down by Judge Harold Alder in his request for an immediate preliminary hearing of the fraud charge.

Alder did promise to conduct the hearing any day which comes open and isn't needed for somebody in custody.

Swan was charged with defrauding the federal manpower and immigration department berween Aug. 13, 1975, and April 5, 1976, of about $4,500 by converting the money to a use not specified within the terms of the grant.

RCMP commercial crime section officials in Victoria, announcing the charge last week, said Swan had received an L.I.P. grant of about $13,400 for the manufacture and other provision of clothing for the elderly in Greater Victoria.

Vause said Swan wanted trial before county court judge, and prosecutor Robert Mulligan suggested the next open day, Jan. 28.

The defence lawyer objected, saying he had "tried to get this matter before the courts since April . . . he is a businessman and this obviously reflects on his business, this type of publicity."

He said he had written to the solicitor-general, RCMP commissioner and several MPs since April but the summons was not issued until last Friday "and then they took it upon themselves to inform the press."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A Victoria couple was cleared by Judge Douglas Campbell in Victoria provincial court of a two-count charge laid under the Landlord and Tenants Act.

John and Shannon Shumka, 406 Cook, had been due for trial Thursday but prosecutor Armand Petronio rose to point out the charge contained a flaw which Campbell had already ruled several times was enough to mean charges should be quashed.

The flaw was the failure of those who typed the charge to include the words "province of British Columbia" in a description of the place where alleged offences occurred. Prosecutor Nicholas Lang announced some weeks ago that instructions were given to include the words in all typed charges.

Sidney Blair Rhodes, 19, no fixed address, was sentenced to two years less a day following a plea of guilty Sept. 23 to a Saanich charge of a Sept. 18 break-in and theft of $330 cash from a service station at 3480 Quadra. Judge Harold Alder ruled the term will run at the same time as a sentence Rhodes recently received for another offence.

In traffic court, jail terms were imposed by Judge F. S. Green for two drivers on conviction for drink-drive offences. They were Michael Sophonow, 35, of 3336 Roberlack, stopped Sept. 22 in Saanich for driving with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent and sentenced to a 10-day intermittent term, and Victoria area resident David Stevenson, 45, stopped Sept. 4 in Victoria for impaired driving and jailed for five days.

Herbert Isadore Woods, 22, of 2330 Cook, also was cleared of two Victoria charges, but for a different reason.

Woods was awaiting hearing on one charge of theft Sept. 11 of a pair of pants and a knife and possession of the same known stolen items, and a second charge of possession of a knife Sept. 11 for a purpose dangerous to the public peace.

Prosecutor Robert Mulligan entered stays on both charges, meaning Woods could go free. The prosecutor said later the action was taken for lack of evidence.

People Asked To Name Murder Price

CHICAGO (AP) — "What is the least amount of money you would take to push a button to kill a person inside a black box so that no one would ever know what you did?"

A psychologist put that question to 200 persons around Andrews Air Force Base near Washington, D.C., in 1975 and to an additional 452 persons interviewed this year in St. Mary's County, Md.

Their answers, said Dr. Paul Cameron, point to a disregard for the value of human life in U.S. society.

The people interviewed were divided into two groups: those who acknowledged having deliberately killed someone, usually in military service; and those who had never killed or tried to.

Forty-five percent of those who had killed before said they would murder for money, Cameron said. The average price for them was $20,000.

Of those who had never killed or tried to, 25 per cent said they would do it and their average price was $50,000.

"Lethality feeds upon itself," said Cameron, who reported on his work recently at the annual meeting of the National Federation of Catholic Physicians' Guilds in Oak Brook, Ill. He elaborated in a telephone interview.

Document Belies Oswald Evidence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contrary to sworn testimony, the Central Intelligence Agency once considered using presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald as a source of intelligence information about the Soviet Union, says newly released CIA documents.

In sworn testimony before the Warren Commission, former CIA director Richard Helms said the agency neither had nor even contemplated having any contact with Oswald.

The document, written by an unidentified CIA officer three days after President John Kennedy was killed in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, says "we showed intelligence interest" in Oswald and "discussed . . . the laying on of interviews."

The unidentified officer added that: "I do not know what action developed thereafter."

The memo was among hundreds of pages of documents from the CIA's file on Oswald. The material was released to The Associated Press on Thursday under the Freedom of Information Act.

A second document reveals that former CIA director Allen Dulles, while serving as a member of the Warren Commission, privately counselled CIA officials on the best way to answer questions from the commission about allegations that Oswald was a CIA agent.

When he appeared before the commission in May, 1964, Helms, then head of the CIA's clandestine services, testified under oath that "there's no material in the Central Intelligence Agency, either in the records or in the mind of any of the individuals that there was any contact had or even contemplated with Oswald."

Whooper Experiment Working

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — A fledgling flock of rare whooping cranes may have twice as many birds for its southward migration this fall as it did a year ago.

The experimental flock, which now consists of whoopers nearly 18 months old and birds that hatched this summer, was started last year by wildlife officials who hope to increase the survival chances of the endangered species.

Four birds made the flight from Idaho to central New Mexico last fall and returned north in the spring. Wildlife officials say four newly hatched cranes apparently will join the migration this year.

"The whoopers should start moving south in middle or late October," said Jack Woody, endangered species co-ordinator for the U.S. fish and wildlife service in Albuquerque. "It looks like we can expect six to eight birds coming into New Mexico this year."

The flock was created by taking eggs from the Canadian nesting grounds of the other wild flock of whooping cranes and placing them in sandhill crane nests at Gray's Lake National Wildlife Refuge in southeastern Idaho.

Upon hatching, the baby whoopers "adopt" the sandhills sitting on the nests and follow them south.

Cartoon Warnings for Shake-Up

By ROBERT LINDSEY
New York Times

LOS ANGELES — The voice, unmistakably, is that of Bugs Bunny, and it asks: "What do I do when the shaking stops?"

Daffy Duck replies: "Stay away from damaged structures and power lines and remember to stay calm."

Californians are hearing their voices, along with those of a cast of six other cartoon characters, and the frequent thunder of simulated earthquakes, perhaps dozens of times a week on the radio.

In the first such project in the nation, California is inaugurating a program to warn citizens how to prepare for a major earthquake, how to stay alive when one occurs, and what to do afterwards.

Californians have been living with geologists' theories that the state was overdue for a major arthquake for more than a decade, based on the historical pattern of major earthquakes along the state's network of earth faults.

For the most part, the public has regarded such forecasts with apathy. But, at least in official disaster planning circles, worries about a possible super-earthquake have increased since the discovery last year of a so-called "bulge" in the Antelp Valley, about 35 miles from downtown Los Angeles.

Earth scientists found that in an area covering about 4,500 square miles, the land had been thrust up by up to 11 inches sometime in the early 1900s.

Earthquake specialists stress that the bulge could mean nothing. Or, they say, it could be a sign of great stresses accumulating in the earth's crust before they are released in the form of an earthquake. Such an uplift is found to have occurred prior to a 1971 earthquake that killed more than 60 persons in the San Fernando Valley.

Based on changes in the speed of soundwaves travelling through the fault during the past two years, Dr. James Whitcomb, a California Institute of Technology researcher, predicted on April 20 that there would be a moderate to heavy earthquake in the San Fernando Valley area within the next 12 months.

Largely because of these developments, the state's Office of Emergency Services has recently urged governmental agencies, including school districts, to update disaster preparations and to take other precautions, including removal of any structures that would pose a hazard to life during a major quake.

Los Angeles building-safety officials have estimated that there are more than 13,000 potentially unsafe, unreinforced buildings in the city and have proposed their removal, especially those used as places of public assembly. But to date, partly because of opposition by property owners, the buildings are still standing.

A safety program initiated over the weekend is designed to shake Californians' traditional apathy towards earthquakes.

The state Office of Emergency Services hired Mel Blanc, a multi-voiced actor who created the voices of Bugs Bunny, Porky Pig and many other cartoon characters, to produce 10 radio spot announcements that it hopes will bring hope to californians the danger of earthquakes and persuade them to prepare for a serious tremblor.

A movie production company was retained to make four television spot announcements, featuring a Los Angeles mime, Antonion Modek, to show viewers what to do — and not to do — during and after a quake.

The recorded spot announcements are being sent to approximately 400 radio stations and 60 television stations in the state, which are being asked to broadcast them free as public service messages.

In one radio spot, after an introductory "beep, beep," the voices of the "Roadrunner" and his nemises, a coyote, urge listeners to stay out of damaged buildings following an earthquake because of the risk of aftershock.

NIXON LETTERS FAKES

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The postal service says the 22 love letters former president Richard Nixon allegedly wrote to the wife of a foreign diplomat were forgeries.

A Nixon lawyer, Herbert Miller Jr., Thursday released a report of chief postal inspector C. Neil Benson, saying "a handwriting analysis has determined that the letters were not written by Mr. Nixon."

The letters "apparently originated in Washington and passed through the hands of individuals in Detroit and Los Angeles before coming to the attention of New York literary agent Scott Meredith," Benson said.

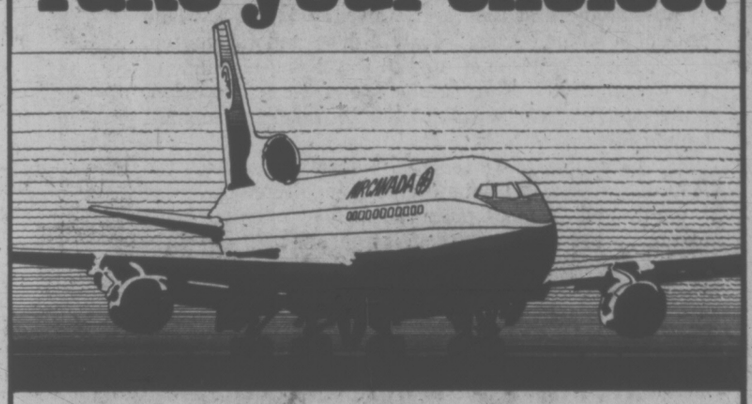

"The inspection service was able to trace the letters back as far as a Washington salesman, now deceased, who apparently knew the letters were a hoax but who did not himself write them," he added.

He said it had been determined that the person receiving and attempting to sell the letters "did not know them to be forgeries and had no intent to defraud."

DEPUTY SHOT ACCIDENTALLY

PORT ORCHARD, Wash. (Ap) — A Kitsap County sheriff's deputy was reported in serious but stable condition Thursday after being wounded when the weapon of a fellow officer discharged at a cafe.

Authorities said Deputy John Strachan was wounded in the neck by a .38-calibre bullet which lodged near his spine. He underwent several hours of surgery for its removal.

Police said Strachan and off-duty policeman Mark Christensen had stopped at the cafe for a cup of coffee. Christensen was seated at the counter, and when Strachan walked behind the counter Christensen's weapon accidentally discharged.

Hanky-Panky in Prowl Cars

QUANTICO, Va. (WP) — "Hi," said the smiling, attractive FBI trainee as she walked by in her drab green starched fatigues.

"Wow," said one the police chiefs as she passed.

"I was born 40 years too early," said Indianapolis chief Gene Gallagher.

If there had always been policewomen, added Seattle Chief Bob Hanson, "I wouldn't have just celebrated my 32nd anniversary."

This joking discussion pointed out what is seen as a serious problem by The Major City Chiefs, the group of powerful, colorful commanders of the largest U.S. police and sheriff departments who met recently at the FBI training academy here for an executive education program.

"One of the most destructive things in police work is male-female partners, as far as breakups of families go," said FBI man Ed Tully as the chiefs talked on about this subject at lunch one day.

Seattle's Hanson said that after he "put 11 women on the street," three of the four married women among them subsequently filed for divorce, and four of the men who had been teamed with women also started divorce proceedings.

Hanson explained that under the tremendous stress of police work, "You learn to depend on your partner. You're there eight hours a night side-by-side. You have to get to know your partner."

"You translate that to male-female and you get sex," Tully added.

"If you put two women together (in a squad car), they flight," said Dallas chief Dan Byrd. "If you put male and female together, they fornicate."

Hanson said he expects that wives of married officers will soon organize into a determined lobby group. "These women were married to police officers and they know their husbands' roles were dangerous," he said. "But at no time did anyone explain that their husband would be working in a prowl car with a woman from 8 p.m. to 4 a.m. Do we have a moral obligation to that family? You bet your bippy. My legal adviser says that we will be sued and we will lose — it's called 'alienation of affection.'"

Mary Worth Sets a Comic Strip First

CHICAGO (UPI) — Many a bright and pretty 17-year-old unmarried high school girl has become pregnant before — but tell her story in a comic strip?

Allen Saunders, the writer, and Ken Ernst, the artist, have set out to do just that in the comic strip "Mary Worth," and their presentation is believed to be the first of its kind in that form for general circulation newspapers.

Kathy Klabunde, a sales coordinator for Field Enterprises, Inc., Chicago, which syndicates the strip, said the organization has received no reader or subscriber complaints, and it is about a "typical, all-American girl."

"There will be no attempt to glamorize this." Saunders said the same.

Expected to last three months, the sequence tells the story of Karen Cooper, 17, a "very attractive" high school senior and winner of first place in a national scholarship contest.

In portraying the girl as a gifted person, Saunders said, "we wanted to make her that kind of girl to show it can happen to anyone."

The story sequence will run about three months. Saunders refused to say what the ending will be, other than "the question of the girl's future is where it ends."

Lobotomy Victim Sues for $28M

SEATTLE (AP) — A 47-year-old man has filed a $28 million lawsuit against the state over a frontal lobotomy performed without his permission in 1948.

The suit was filed in King County Superior Court on behalf of Phil Louis Deiro, who was released in February 1972. Since being released, Deiro has experienced epileptic seizures, loss of control over discharge of urine, loss of abstract learning abilify and general apathy, says his attorney, Robert Czeisler.

Deiro was committed to the institution at the age of 19 for an indefinite period of time by his mother "because she said she couldn't hande him, and the doctors agreed," Czeisler said.

The suit claims Deiro was detained against his will for 26 years at the mental institution, which since has been closed. The lobotomy was performed three years after he was committed.

"There was no explanation given my client about what the possible consequences of the lobotomy would be, nor was he asked to consent to it," Czeisler said.

Searchers Fail To Locate Jet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rough seas have hampered the U.S. Navy's search for an F14 jet fighter sunk in the North Atlantic, a Pentagon spokesman said Thursday.

The $15 million F14, the most expensive fighter plane that the United States has, was lost Sept. 14 when it went out of control on takeoff and rolled off the deck of the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy. There were Russian warships in the area at the time.

Also lost was a $500,000 Phoenix missile and other top secret electronic gear. Pentagon spokesman M. Alan Woods said the Navy tug Shakori has already conducted 104 search hours, towing a side-scanning sonar as it tries to find the plane in roughly 2,000 feet of water, about 100 miles northeast of Scotland.

Woods said a three square mile area where the plane was most likely to be found has already been searched and the Shakori is now searching a 6.5 square mile area.

Last week, Navy salvage director Capt. Robert B. Moss predicted the plane would be located within three days, but the search has now gone five days with no results.

"There has been bad weather and heavy seas hampering the search" Woods said. However, he added, "the people in the Navy still feel confident" that the plane can be recovered.

A civilian contractor, Seaward Inc. of Falls Church, Va., is conducting the search, along with the Navy.

American Copyright Extended

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress has sent to the White House the first new version of the nation's copyright law since its enactment in 1909.

President Gerald Ford is expected to sign the bill, which provides for longer copyrights, more money for composers and guarantees greater protection for authors.

The House passed the Senate-approved bill by voice vote Thursday.

The existing law provides a copyright to an author for 28 years, renewable for a second 28 if he is still alive. The bill would grant works produced after Jan. 1, 1978, a copyright lasting the author's life plus 50 years. Works copyrighted before then would be granted a 75-year protection.

N. COWICHAN SPLIT URGED BY SOCIETY

CHEMAINUS — North Cowichan should be split in two, says the Chemainus Valley Historical Society.

This decision was reached unanimously at its recent annual meeting, which also found the Chemainus River Valley "has not been adequately served" by the present municipality of North Cowichan.

Elizabeth Pedersen, society secretary, said their recommendation had been forwarded to the committee studying boundary realignment in the Cowichan Valley.

Folk Dentistry: Fishing Line, Weight to Pull Teeth

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fishing line and 10-pound weights are no longer essential tools for tooth extraction in remote areas of British Columbia with the advent of the provincial government's mobile dental fleet.

The fleet consists of six vans with the latest in dental equipment that can provide dental service to any area in the province served by a road.

Dr. Bruce Johnson, one of the dentists in the program, began his second year recently with a trip to Grassy Plains, a village in north-central B.C.

"I could write a book on the last year," he said before embarking on the trip.

He had travelled about 4,000 miles visiting nine communities in the north, the Kootenay, Okanagan, and northern Vancouver Island, where dental work was strictly do-it-yourself.

"Folk dentistry," Dr. Johnston called it. "I learned some things out there I never got in school."

But he hasn't adopted any of the home cures, which included using turpentine as a mouthwash and pulling out teeth by attaching a 10-pound weight to fishing line and then dropping the weight down a hole.

"I'm trying to adapt them to my ideas," said Dr. Johnson.

"I explain it logically and show them how to read x-rays. That way, there isn't too much that they don't understand.

Also included is a course in decay prevention.

"Compared with private practice, these people are much more grateful for what you do," he said.

Dr. Johnson said the major shortcoming in the program is the immediate payment required, which may be a financial burden for families often seeing a dentist for the first time.

The dentists, most of them recent university graduates, charge fees that cannot exceed 90 per cent of the rate listed in the College of Dental Surgeons fee schedule. Equipment is maintained by the provincial health department.

Dentists said the new vans eliminate the time-consuming packing and moving which hampered previous programs.

Now the major hardship facing the dentists is the necessity to live out of a suitcase. The government and the College of Dental Surgeons hope this will cause some of the dentists to decide to settle down in remoter areas.

"There are enough dentists; the problem now is unequal distribution," said Dr. Don MacFarlane, a travelling dentist in the early 1950s.

Estimates are that about 10,000 people from 42 communities visited the mobile clinics in 1975.

Engineer Now Slopping Hogs

LISTOWEL, Ont. (CP) — What's Albert Whiting, a nuclear electronic engineer, doing milking cows and slopping hogs?

"In my engineering work, I felt I was a parasite and doing nothing for society."

However, being a farmer for the last seven years in this area 28 miles northeast of Stratford has been a rocky road for British-born Mr. Whiting.

He's one of many milk producers feeling the pinch of government-ordered production cuts.

And although he and other Perth County farmers have banded together to fight for a better deal, he said they have run into a stone wall at the provincial level.

"The results as far as the farmers are concerned are negligible from the provincial government and the milk marketing board," he said. "But the Farm Credit Corp. of the federal government has been some help."

"They not only sympathize with our problem, but they have done something."

Mr. Whiting said farmers in financial difficulty are given up to a two-year moratorium on farm credit mortgage payments.

"Not only that, if you go to them (federal), they don't just give you platitudes," he said. "They say, 'OK, you've got a problem; let's solve it.'"

Mr. Whiting said the Ontario Milk Producers' Marketing Board's proposal to allow increased quota allotments to needy producers won't help many farmers, and in one case would amount to only two day's production.

He said he is fortunate that he made a decision two years ago to maintain a hog operation along with dairy. It has enabled him to pay off some of the bills accumulated as a result of the production cuts.

His years in the industry, coupled with his farming setbacks, have made Mr. Whiting cynical of government thinking.

"I have little trust in bureaucracies built up over years of experience," he said. "The decisions made by civil servants in their ivory towers are sometimes beyond comprehension."

Ex-Chief Will Run For Duncan Council

DUNCAN — A seat on Duncan city council is the announced aim of the former chief of the Cowichan Indian band, Dennis Alphonse.

Alphonse, 43, said this week he thought a better relationship between the city and band could be developed if there was a band member on the municipal council.

Alphonse until recently was employed as executive director of the Victoria Native Friendship Centre and currently fills a similar post in the Cowichan Valley.

Duncan Mayor Ken Pasian commented he would welcome Alphonse on council if he is elected.

Cut fuel oil costs!

The amazing thermoshell Clean-Start Burner can reduce heating oil consumption by as much as 10%... it's just one important way we can help control your heating costs.

A more efficient design

Perhaps you thought one furnace burner was much like another? Well, that's certainly not true anymore!

Compared to conventional models, the new thermoshell furnace with Clean-Start Burner can reduce the amount of fuel you burn by as much as 10%. This advanced design is the result of our continuing program to find ways to conserve fuel.

How it saves fuel. Your furnace goes on and off thousands of times each winter. Every time it does, some fuel is not burnt efficiently. Result? Smoky flare-ups with energy-robbing soot deposited on burner, furnace interior and flue pipe. When it's shut off some oil may leak into the combustion chamber, too.

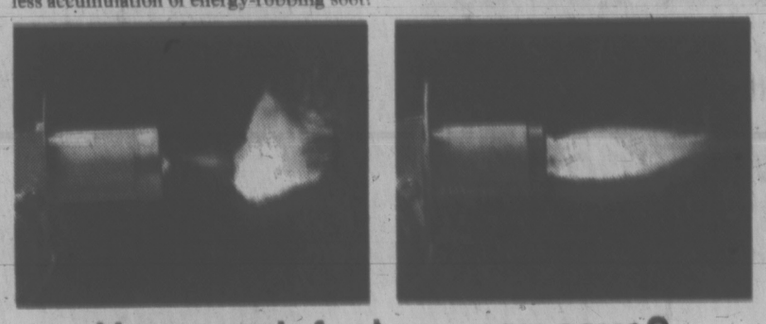

The thermoshell furnace overcomes these problems with a delayed start-up that allows a stabilized air flow/oil pressure to ensure split-second ignition. It also stops instantly on shut-off.

Our Clean-Start Burner has other advantages, too. A higher furnace efficiency than provided by older gun-type burners. And this efficiency can be maintained throughout the heating season. It also reduces soot emissions to the atmosphere.

If you're building a new home, or your furnace is on its last legs, give serious thought to this amazingly efficient furnace. If you pay $450 a year for fuel oil, it could mean a saving of $45!

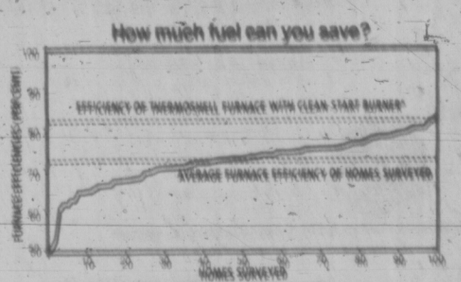

Clean-Start Burner in action!

LEFT: The large, irregular flame from an old-style gun burner. RIGHT: You can see the Clean-Start Burner has a more intense and stable flame. It is also cleaner so there's less accumulation of energy-robbing soot.

How much fuel can you save?

Chart shows average efficiency of old-style burner-furnace units in a recent survey of Canadian homes. You can see that over 95% of the units were working below the 82.5% efficiency of our unit. In fact, 40% were working 10% or more below the efficiency of the thermoshell unit! (The average efficiency of all the homes was 72.5%). Now you know why we say that this amazing burner-furnace unit could reduce your fuel oil consumption by 10% or more!

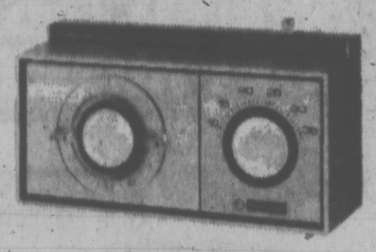

Save while you sleep!

The thermoshell Chronotherm Thermostat by Honeywell can help cut your annual fuel bill by up to 10%.*

Just lower the temperature setting before you go to bed. In the morning, the Chronotherm automatically returns your home to daytime comfort. So you save fuel while you sleep and still wake up in comfort.

You can install the thermoshell Chronotherm Thermostat yourself in a matter of minutes.

Phone or mail coupon for full information about this fuel-saving device.

Avoid maintenance problems

Comprehensive Protection Plan: One low price gives you protection on vital parts of your heating unit. Emergency service is available should your system develop trouble.

You also get one annual furnace clean-out and burner tune-up. That's an important service in itself. According to the government* an efficient furnace-burner can cut your fuel bill significantly.

With features like these, our Comprehensive Protection Plan could soon pay for itself in lower operating costs and peace of mind.

Estimates of fuel savings from the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources book, "100 ways to save energy and money in the home."*

Chinese Issued Quake Alerts

By JAY MATHEWS
Washington Post

HONG KONG — Continued Chinese sensitivity to potential new natural disasters has led authorities to issue earthquake alerts in three widely separate parts of the country, according to knowledgeable Hong Kong sources.

The sources said the latest earthquake warning, in Siang, a major city in northwestern China, last week led its 1.6 million inhabitants to begin precautions including moving out of their homes into temporary street shelter. Other areas under similar warnings are Yangchou, in coastal Kiangsu Province, and the Leichou Peninsula of Kwangtung Province, just north of Hainan Island.

The sources were, some with links to the Peking government, suggested that Chinese efforts to recover from the summer's earthquakes and guard against new ones, along with grief over Chairman Mao Tse-tung's death and complications in handling his remains, might delay any meeting of the Communist Party central committee to consider leadership shifts.

Western analysts said they have been receiving scattered reports from travellers to China of new earthquake warnings, but say they know nothing of the situation in the three areas specifically mentioned by the Hong Kong sources.

"They are taking some extra precautions," said one analyst, "presumably to avoid what happened in Tangshan," the northern China city reportedly left in shambles when an earth quake struck without warning July 28.

Sources here suggested that the Chinese leadership is further distracted by the ticklish question of what to do with Mao's remains. There have been reports that Mao wished to be cremated, like other Chinese leaders, but many Chinese would prefer to embalm his body for permanent display, the same honor accorded the body of Lenin in the Kremlin.

Such a plan would force leaders to decide what city to display the body in, wehther a new display hall should be built or an existing building used, and what method of preservation would be most reliable.

The Chinese leadership's ability to keep its ideological differences in check during this period of uncertainty was demonstrated again in excerpts released last weekend from the first article written for the key theoretical journal Red Flag since Mao's death Sept. 9.

The article, excerpted by the new China News Agency, called for defeat of "the bourgeoisie inside the party," whom Peking leftists appear to want purged, but called for no concrete action stronger than "studying Marxism-Leninism-Mao Tse-tung thought." The author, Chih Heng, whose name has been attached to leftist articles in the past, also warned against wearing "the cloak of 'Marxism' to oppose Marxism."

Campus in Rumpus When Sewers Plug

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Camosun College teacher Estelle Inman's home has a certain class.

About 20 strong in fact.

When a plugged sewer interrupted routines last Friday at the Quadra Street campus, the business teacher opened up her home at 1875 Carnarvon to her students.

She has been teaching bookkeeping and English in the living room, beginning accounting in the dining room and senior accounting in the rumpus room, or on the patio when it has been sunny.

"I've taught in all sorts of places, there's no real sweat here," she said Thursday.

Water was shut off in the building at 1250 Quadra Street because of a sewer blockage on View Street.

The city is working on the problem, but meanwhile, no water can be used.

Bookkeeping student Elizabeth Arny, 34, of 848 Monterey, said she didn't know what would have been done if Mrs. Inman hadn't held classes in her house.

"I think it's fantastic what she did. We wouldn't have been able to write our exams this week," she said. "We must be the luckiest class in Victoria."

Mrs. Inman said the students range in age from 18 to 60 and all are on fairly short programs so its important for them not to miss classes.

"The neighbors were quite intrigued," she said, but once they learned what was happening, offered chairs and coffee.

Mrs. Inman said the enthusiasm and willingness to help in crowded conditions has proved to her that the students really want to learn.

"Even today we're not all that far from the little red school house," she said.

TOWN TALK

The Red Cross recently launched a program in a number of city elementary schools to teach youngsters accident prevention and first aid.

To help get the thing off the ground, a number of teachers attended a workshop cum orientation course to learn about the program.

The Tillicum elementary nominee — Mrs. Pauline St. Clair — dutifully attended.

At school next day, she stepped on a piece of apple peel dropped by a pupil and broke her ankle.

Congratulations, Colwood-Langford, on so rapidly shedding the last remnants of your stuffy, antiquated rural image and getting with it, 20th century-wise.

Let's see, you already have such fine unique amenities as the Colonel, A & W, and Smitty's. And now (will wonder never cease?) you're about to get Dairy Queen and the ultimate sign that you've joined the rest of North America — McDonald's.

All of them, of course, complete with their architectural splendor and tasteful signposting, Rotating buckets, the whole bit.

So civilized, don't you think? And much more interesting to look at than those boring old fields, trees and open spaces which used to clutter up the place.

HOFFER
. . . at Jubilee

Dr. Abram Hoffer, the Saskatoon psychiatrist and biochemist famous for treatment of schizophrenia with massive doses of vitamins, has moved to Victoria after 27 years of practice on the Prairies.

Hoffer drew overflow crowds when he delivered public lectures on his controversial megavitamin therapy here in recent years, claiming an 80 per cent success ratio in treatment which some of his colleagues in the medical profession claim they have never been able to duplicate using his methods.

He is now on the medical staff at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Every now and then we're jolted with a reminder of the rabid racism that dominated official thinking even in Victoria's fairly recent history.

When city archivist Ainslie Helmcken was digging into his records this week, to provide some background information for a reporter writing about the announced closure of the Ogden Point grain elevator, he turned up the 1925 contract for the construction of the terminal.

In the agreement between the city of Victoria and Panama Pacific Grain Terminals Ltd., the company graciously undertook "not to employ Oriental labor."

Makes you suspect there wasn't a human rights commission around in those days . . .

It was cold and foggy tthe other night, and the hobo under the big Undersea Gardens billboard on the Pat Bay Highway may have thought he was under water he was so cold.

So he kindled a fire at the base of the sign to warm up a little while trying to hitch a ride into town to find a place to crash for the night.

A passing motorist, however, thought the sign was on fire and called Central Saanich volunteer fire department.

The volunteers responded, put out the fire and Central Saanich police drove the chilly hitch-hiker to the Town and Country shopping centre where he caught a bus to warmth and shelter.

One of the prosecution witnesses at CFB Esquimalt court martial proceedings asked to be excused early so he could return to his posting at Camp Shilo.

Cpl. James Simpson, a former mess manager at Club 44, the junior ranks mess whose affairs were investigated here, said he had to get back to Shilo because of an inquiry into the mess there.

"This follows you around, doesn't it?" commented judge advocate Lt.-Col. J. B. Fay, who is judge of the legal aspects of the trial.

At another point, civilian base supply inspector Daniel Barclay was describing his duties in determining whether items are decommissioned or returned to stock, which he called "sentencing."

Quipped Fay: "We're in the same business."

Vancouverite C. M. Parker writes it's not so much the hike in ferry fares that will stop him from visiting Victoria again as the cost of "tourist side shows."

He reports he and a friend spent a whole day vainly looking for a $1 show. Instead they faced the following entry charges: Butchart Gardens, $4; Classic Cars, $2; Wax Museum, $2.50; Undersea Gardens, $2.50; Fable Cottage, $2.50; and Sealand, $2.50.

"In desperation we actually paid our way in to the Undersea Gardens and sure enough it was worth only $1," Parker complains. "The final insult — 40 cents for half a can of Coke at the Sealand coffee shop."

MAN DIES IN FIRE

Fifty-five-year-old John Harmer died Thursday night after fire broke out in his suite in a three-storey rooming house at 2107 Dowler.

Victoria deputy fire chief Carl Coates said firemen responding to the 10:18 p.m. alarm quickly extinguished the blaze, which was confined to Harmer's second-floor room, and found Harmer lying on his bed.

Coates said the bedding had been consumed by flames and he presumed Harmer had fallen asleep while smoking.

Coates said considering the seriousness of the fire, structural damage was relatively light — about $2,000. He placed total damages at about $5,000.

The fire was spotted by John Gannon, 64, who occupies a room across the hallway from the victim.

Coates said Gannon was getting ready for bed when he smelled smoke, went into the corridor and discovered smoke oozing from under Harmer's door. Gannon banged on the door but was unable to rouse Harmer, and was forced by smoke and intense heat to flee the building.

1,000 Voters Added After Citizen Drive

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

At least 1,000 names were authorized to be added today to the Victoria voter's list, and several hundred more could follow before the three-member Court of Revision has finished sitting.

No precise breakdown was available this morning for the court members — Mayor Mike Young, Ald. Bill Tindall and Ald. Ron McKenzie — but the bulk of the new names was apparently added through the efforts of Victoria neighborhood groups and associations during a month-long campaign to register voters.

Originally denied the right to take out bulk supplies of registration cards by city clerk Morran Waller, the groups took the matter to court and won a ruling in their favor.

Armed with piles of cards, they spent most of August on a sign-up drive which included establishing booths in shopping centres and door-to-door registration by volunteers.

When Waller entered the City Hall committee room this morning he was clutching two large stacks of cards which, he said, had been submitted so late that there had been insufficient time to process or count them all.

But about half of them had been verified as eligible voters, he said. The panel authorized these and a separate list of 560 qualified voters to be added to the rolls.

Unchecked cards, totalling between about 700 and 1,000, will be scrutinized and submitted to a later sitting of the court.

Waller said between 10 and 23 per cent of all cards submitted by outside agencies were not valid for registration. Among the reasons: wrong names, incorrect addresses, incomplete details, proxy signatures, no witness, residence in other municipalities.

McKenzie said this rejection rate seems proof enough that "these people (the neighborhood groups) are not capable of handling registration," and that "what the city clerk has been saying is in fact the case."

He wondered whether the city should appeal the B.C. Supreme Court ruling which allowed the free access by all and sundry to bulk supplies of cards.

Waller expressed concern that many of the stubs attached to the cards (a form of receipt indicating the person's name has been added to the list) have been detached by those conducting the registration, without any assurance that the person is an eligible voter.

This is one of the problems that arises when "some dingaling runs around town and signs 'em up," he added.

McKenzie said it was conceivable that some disgruntled resident who had been led to believe he was officially registered might launch proceedings to have the civic election declared null and void.

In Saanich there are 40,865 eligible voters, municipal clerk Gordon Hayward reported today.

This represents an increase of just over 1,400 on the 1975 count.

In 1975 there were only about 100 new voters added to the 1974 list.

Hayward attributes the large increase to the housing expansion in the municipality and also to efforts made to contact each resident.

"We sent reminder cards out with water bills," Hayward said, "We also contacted every apartment in Saanich with the co-operation of apartment managers."

Squeeze Threatens Patient Care

The provincial squeeze on operating funds has pushed Victoria General Hospital into the red — but directors were told Thursday night any more cost-cutting could jeopardize safe patient care.

Cliff Horwood, chairman of the board's finance committee, told directors the operating deficit is probably between $250,000 and $300,000 now and could climb to $350,000 by year end.

Last year Victoria General was the only major hospital in B.C. to operate without a deficit and this year's red ink comes despite a number of cost-shaving moves.

The board endorsed the finance committee's motion which read: "having thoroughly reviewed the current status of operating expenditures in the hospital, the finance committee is not prepared to recommend further cost-cutting activities without the board's full cognizance of the very real hazard that such measures may very well jeopardize safe patient care."

Two weeks ago a delegation from the B.C. Health Association, which represents hospitals throughout B.C., told Health Minister Bob McClelland that operating deficits among all hospitals this year will total $17 million to $18 million.

Royal Jubilee Hospital finished last year with a deficit of $1.3 million and has warned there will be another sizable deficit this year unless further provincial funding is made available.

Pizza Driver Robbed

Victoria police are searching for two suspects who held up a pizza parlor employee early today and robbed him of $229.

Police said Gary Johnson, 17, an employee of Romeo's Pizza, 1577 Hillside, was delivering an order to a house at 1034 Princess at 2:20 a.m. when he heard someone calling out to him over a fence in an adjacent lot.

When Johnson went to investigate, two masked men emerged, one brandishing a rifle.

They told Johnson to step over the fence, take off his shoes and hand over his money and the keys to the delivery van.

The men drove off in the van and Johnson called police.

The van was later found in the 900-block Queens.

Woman Charged With Aiding Escape

A 20-year-old woman was charged Thursday in Victoria provincial court with providing the boat used in the sea escape of three men from William Head prison Aug. 5.

Lori Kathleen Baker, 20, 335 St. James, was charged with three counts of assisting the escape of William Ewanchuk, Derek John Poulsen and John Wesley Edwards. She was arrested late last week after a Kamloops hospital incident.

She told Judge Douglas Campbell she wanted to see her lawyer and the case was remanded to this morning for a bail hearing and possibly also choice of trial method and plea.

Kamloops RCMP announced the arrest of Ewanchuk one week ago today but denied reports that a woman was arrested at the some time. However, Colwood RCMP said Thursday both a man and a woman were arrested after they were taken to hospital in Kamloops for treatment of suspected overdoses of morphine.

A police spokesman said Ewanchuk had not yet been brought to Victoria to face an escaping charge because he was also arrested in Kamloops on one charge of possession of morphine for the purpose of trafficking and a second of a break-in and theft at a drugstore.

Ewanchuk, 24, was sentenced in 1973 in Calgary to six years for trafficking in a narcotic. Poulsen, 22, was sentenced in 1974 at Nanaimo to six years for trafficking in heroin. Edwards, 30, was sentenced last June 24 at Vancouver to a lengthy term for robbery and parole forfeiture.

Poulsen gave himself up in mid-August to Vancouver police amid reports a woman friend of his was to take similar action at that time. He was returned to Victoria, pleaded guilty to an escaping charge, and was sentenced Aug. 20 to six extra months in jail.

Edwards remained at large Thursday.

On Aug. 5, a woman rented a small motorboat at Pedder Bay Marina shortly before a woman in a similar boat was seen taking aboard three men in a cove along the William Head shoreline.

The boat was later found abandoned in James Bay and police said its four occupants took a ferry to Tsawwassen from Swartz Bay. By the time Delta RCMP were notified and got to the Tsawwassen dock, the ferry's passengers had been gone about 10 minutes.

Cost Makes Low-Alcohol Beer a Fizzle

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Efforts to get British Columbians to drink more low-alcohol beer won't succeed unless the Liquor Administration Branch changes its pricing policies, brewery industry representatives contend.

Mike McInnis, director of marketing for Labatts, said in an interview the LAB will have to slash its price — and its profit margin — on low-alcohol beer if the product is to capture a larger share of the market.

Henry Binder, an administrator with Uncle Ben's brewery, agreed.

They were asked to comment on a recent statement by Attorney-General Garde Gardom who thinks the availability of "light" beers might reduce the level of drunkenness in beer parlors — and help cut impaired driving.

Since introduced three years ago, the two low-alcohol brands (3.9%) offered in B.C., Cool Spring by Labatts, and Gentle Ben by Uncle Ben, have only accounted for about one quarter of one per cent of the total beer sales.

"In terms of the market share the low-alcohol products here have been a failure," Binder said.

But in the Prairie provinces low-alcohol beer sales run as high as four to five per cent of the market.

Why the difference?

It's the pricing formula, McInnis insists. He noted in Alberta a case of low-alcohol brew sells for 60 cents less than the regular brands; in Manitoba, it's 30 cents less.

In B.C., however, the savings is only 19 cents, or roughly one and a half cents a bottle.

And that's just not enough of an incentive to get beer drinkers to switch, McInnis said.

Binder said governments in other provinces are apparently trying to encourage people to drink lower alcohol beverages, "and doing it because they feel it's a responsible part of the government function."

B.C. beer drinkers, by and large, are finicky, McInnis said. They get comfortable drinking a particular brand and don't want to change. They're used to beer that's five per cent alcohol by volume. They don't want something weaker, like a 3.9 per cent low-alcohol brew, or even something stronger, like a fortified beer such as the now defunct Frontier by Molsons.

He said the introduction of any new line of beer is fraught with problems.

First there's the problem of matching supply with anticipated demand. That's critical because unless beer is consumed within three months, it generally has to be thrown out.

Then there's the problem of economies of scale. Because, proportionately so little low-alcohol beer is being produced, profitable economies are nearly impossible to achieve.

The result is that low-alcohol brew, from the companies' standpoint, is a money-loser.

Why do they continue producing it?

McInnis said it is partly a "sense of corporate responsibility to meet a demand no matter how small."

But he intimated there were other reasons. For instance, there's an expectation more breweries in Canada will follow the lead of those in the United States and start promoting lighter beers. And there's an expectation governments here will eventually try to encourage consumption of lower alcohol brews as a way to counter drunkenness. Finally there's an expectation beer drinkers' tastes can be changed even though the process may take time.

But as the manager of the Bastion Inn in Victoria indicated the barriers are formidable.

"We used to carry the low-alchol brand but there was no way we could move it. We had to practically give it away.

"Now we don't carry it any longer. We just don't get any call for it. The demand's not there."

I'M QUITTING, SAYS ALI

ISTANBUL (AP) — World heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali said today he is quitting fighting to devote himself to spreading the Moslem faith throughout the world.

"As of now," Ali told a crowd of reporters and photographers, "I am quitting boxing and will devote all my energy to the propagation of the Moslem faith."

Ali said his decision to end his boxing career came at the urging of Wallace Muhammad, leader of the Black Moslem community in the United States, who is also in Turkey at the invitation of the pro-Moslem National Salvation party.

Ali, who successfully defended his title Tuesday night in New York City against Ken Norton, made his comments at a news conference in the Istanbul governor's office.

"Mark my words and play what I say right now fully," Ali said. "At the urging of my leader Wallace, I declare that I am quitting fighting as of now and from now on I will join in the struggle for the Islamic cause."

Wallace said Ali has already contributed greatly to the Moslem community in the United States and expressed the desire that he will devote more attention to his religious faith after he retires.

Turkey's deputy premier, Mecmettim Ecbaan, and State Minister Hasan Aksay, both members of the Salvation party, applauded Ali's announcement. Ecbaan wished him "a victorious result in carrying the sword of Islam throughout the world."

After the conference Ali and the entourage attended noon prayers at the early 18th century Blue Mosque under the guidance of a muezzin and the preaching of religious affairs minister Suleyman Ates.

This is not the first time Ali has said he would retire. In June 1975 he said his fight with Joe Bugner of Britain would be his last.

But following that fight in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, Ali has fought and defeated Joe Frazier, Jean-Pierre Coopman, Jimmy Young, Richard Dunn and Ken Norton. After defeating Norton earlier this week in New York's Yankee Stadium to retain his title, Ali spoke of possibly defending his championship a last time against the winner of a Norton-George Foreman fight.

'If I Had It to Do Over Again, I'd Score It the Same Way'

By FRANK BROWN

NEW YORK (AP) — The days since the Muhammad Ali-Ken Norton heavyweight championship fight have been busy ones for Harold Lederman, one of the judges who awarded a controversial decision to the champion. Television stations have been sending camera crews to his drug store in the Bronx, and reporters and relatives from all over the country have been telephoning.

It's a moment of celebrity for the 36-year-old pharmacist who along with Barney Smith and referee Authur Mercante have been thrust under the scrutiny of the boxing public after what Lederman said "turned out to be one of the most controversial decisions in a lot of years."

Amidst the turmoil, Lederman maintains that only a last-round effort by the champion helped him to retain the title. "During the early rounds, I kept saying to myself, 'Boy, he's handing the title to Norton,' " Lederman said of the fight segment in which Ali went into his clowning act and let Norton do most of the punching.

"It's amazing the guy could have given away so many of the early rounds and know exactly when to start fighting enough to win," Lederman continued. On his card, Ali won the first round and let Norton take the next six. Then there was the late surge, reaching a climax in the 15th round, which Ali won on all three cards.

"In the last round, Muhammad Ali fought for two minutes and 40 seconds. He went to his jab, controlling the action, getting off first. All of a sudden Norton came on in the last 20 seconds.

"If Norton would have jumped on Ali at the beginning of the round, he'd have won the round. There was no doubt about it; Ali was tiring, but Norton seemed to coast in the 15th and it lost him the fight on three cards."

There were those who disagreed strenuously.

Still, what's done is done.

"What can people ask for?" says Lederman. "I called it the way I saw it. I've spent hours reading the newspaper clippings, analysing the way I scored it with the way all the reporters scored it. And I still feel that if I had it to do over again, I'd score it the same way."

IT WAS A DAY FOR SHUTOUTS

Thursday was shutout time in the Greater Victoria High School Girls Field Hockey League.

All six games resulted in shutouts.

Unbeaten but once-tied Mt. Douglas and Oak Bay remained in a tie for first place with comparatively easy victories. Oak Bay blanked Parkland 5-0 while Mt. Doug beat Esquimalt 3-0.

In other games, Dunsmuir shaded Reynolds 1-0; Victoria overpowered Claremont 6-0; Spectrum shut out St. Margarets 3-0 and Norfolk House beat Belmont 3-0.

Glenda Ngai was the day's individual standout with a four-goal effort against Claremont while June Wong scored Victoria's other two goals.

Sharon Larturnus, Debbie Smith and Heather Kirker scored for Mt. Doug while Brenda Young sparked Oak Bay with a pair. Marcia Monaghan, Nancy Littley and Maria Lee each added one for the Bays.

Heather Campbell scored twice and Maureen Cockrill added the other for Spectrum.

Briory Penn counted two for Norfolk House and Carole Tait got the other.

Royals Can Take Pennant By Two Routes Tonight

By The Associated Press

Kansas City Royals hope to clinch baseball's American League West pennant tonight without the help of California Angels, but manager Whitey Herzog will take it anyway he can get it.

"We just want it," says Herzog, "the sooner the better."

After weeks of apprehension, the Royals finally can win the West title by beating Minnesota tonight. And even if they lose to the Twins, they can still win the divisional championship if the Angels defeat Oakland A's later in the evening.

"I'd like to see Frank Tanana go to Oakland and beat the A's," says Herzog, who has been chased down to the wire by Charles Finley's gallant team.

Herzog has nominated Doug Bird to pitch against Minnesota's Dave Goltz in the game at Royals Stadium. However, Herzog is still undetermined about a starter for Saturday. He leans toward Dennis eonard in the event that Kansas City is still in a pennant race.

"But . . . I've got some decisions to make on pitching," says Herzog, hopefully lining up his staff rotation for the American League playoffs against the Eastern champion New York Yankees next week.

Herzog's players, after several weeks of holding off a home-stretch charge by the A's, at last seem to be breathing easier. A victory over Oakland on Wednesday night gave the Royals a comfortable 3½-game lead.

In limited baseball action Thursday night, Detroit Tigers beat Cleveland Indians 6-4 and California trimmed Chicago White Sox 7-3.

A two-run double by Rusty Staub keyed a five-run outburst in the fourth inning that carried Detroit over Cleveland. Ed Glynn picked up his first major league triumph in four decisions with relief help from Steve Grilli.

Rookie Ron Jackson belted a double and two singles while two other newcomers, pitchers Sid Monge and John Verhoeven, teamed up for a seven-hitter as California whipped Chicago. Jackson singled in a run in the second inning, then doubled and scored during a three-run Angels uprising in the fifth to give Monge his sixth victory in 13 decisions.

Cleveland	200 001 100—	4 7 1

WESTS, VIKINGS COMBINE AGAINST NATIONAL TEAM

Victoria West, the defending Canadian club champions, and University of Victoria Vikings, the reigning national collegiate champions, will be joining forces Saturday instead of battling it out in a Premier Division match of the Vancouver Island Soccer League.

The scheduled match had to be postponed because Soccer Canada announced Thursday that the national World Cup team would be coming to Victoria for a warm-up match Saturday at 2:15 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

Brian Hughes of UVic will coach the Viking-West side because Vic West coach Doug Hill, who would have been co-coach, has work commitments.

Hill also was unable to attend the team selections Thursday night at which Hughes and Island League president Doug Day picked nine players from each team to face Soccer Canada.

Jim de Goede of Wests and Mike Armstrong of UVic were both picked but Victoria West will supply most of the forwards and UVic most of the backs.

Mike Hardy was the lone back picked from Wests along with links Steve Moss and John McGuire and forwards Mike Sails, Rob Williams, Ralph Anderson, Steve Forslund and Gary McLaren.

John Gage, Ken Ross, Doug Purich, Gord Mazini and Jim Palm were picked from the UVic backfield along with link Les Malbon and forwards Vic Escude and Peter Zachary.

Soccer Canada is made up mostly of players from Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League but includes other professionals and some amateurs from across Canada.

Victorians Bob Bolitho and Brian Robinson are on the national side, which is scheduled to face Mexico in a World Cup match Oct. 10 in Vancouver.

Ticket prices Saturday will be $1.50 for adults and $1 for old-age pensioners.

Sports 'Court of Appeals' Suggested by Congressman

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Muhammad Ali's victory over Ken Norton was an "atrocious decision" proving the need for a sports "court of appeals," Rep. B. F. Sisk (D — Calif.), contended on the floor of congress Thursday.

"I am am not seeking federal control, but some type of oversight function," Sisk said. "Some place for appeal of a lot of injustices, the violence, the gambling and the pressures."

Sisk spoke to the house and to an interviewer later, telling of his anger at the judges' unanimous decision Tuesday that kept Ali his heavyweight title. Challenger Norton and some sportswriters contend Norton won the fight in Yankee Stadium.

Sisk headed a special committee that looked into the possible antitrust aspects and the finances of professional football, baseball, basketball and hockey. The committee is preparing a final report.

Sisk said he has had "an amazing number of inquiries on other sports — auto racing, soccer, tennis — all the big ones."

The Ali decision "shows just how far down many professional sports have fallen . . . when you have three gutless officials, either bought off or scared off."

He added, "I am totally against a national commission to run sports. On the other hand, because of the fantastic significance and huge amounts of money and the potential for evil in sports, I and others think somehow there should be a sort of court of appeals or oversight group."

Such a group could find out "how much the American people are being ripped of," he said, by sports in which professional athletes are "bought and sold almost as slaves."

As for the Ali decision "there is no question but that it was a bad decision," Sisk said. "I don't think anybody who saw that fight, anybody knowledgeable at all about boxing, feels otherwise. Why does that happen? Is it fear? Is it money? What leads to this kind of atrocious decision?"

Sisk said the idea "is still kind of a figment in my mind" and he is not sure what exactly he would suggest. He said the group should not necesarily have legislative functions, nor necessarily be a federal court, but something with "some kind of oversight function."

Goofy, But Great

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Stan Altgelt made a fond appraisal of the new putter that staked him to a share of the first-round lead Thursday in the $135,000 Sahara Invitational golf tournament.

"It's a goofy-looking thing," he said, "but it gets the job done."

Altgelt, a tour rookie, used the red-and-white striped putter — which features a ridge on the face that imparts a forward roll to the ball — in competition for the first time.

He one-putted 10 times on the way to a seven-under-par 64 that enabled him to tie Wally Armstrong for the top spot.

Armstrong already has assured himself of a spot in the top 60 money-winners and an exemption for next year.

Don January, a veteran who played the par-fives four under, former U.S. Open champion Lou Graham and Bruce Lietzke were two strokes back at 66, five under par on the 6,800-yard Sahara-Nevada Country Club course.

Altgelt tried four times before he finally won his tour playing rights last fall in the PGA school. He failed to qualify in the first few tournaments he entered, then injured his back and was out for four months.

Since then, he has missed only one cut in the last nine tournaments and collected more than $10,000 in winnings.

Rugged Journey Starts for Cats

Victoria Cougars open a gruelling road trip tonight by facing Pats in a Western Canada Hockey League game in Regina.

Before coming home, Cats will play a total of 11 games in 12 nights.

In the only game played Thursday night, Dave Sketetr scored three goals and defenceman Kevin McCarthy picked up four assists to spark Winnipeg Monarchs to an 8-3 decision over visiting Flin Flon Bombers.

Winnipeg outshot Flin Flon 64-18 and completely controlled the play while reaching period leads of 2-0 and 8-2.

Sketler scored all his goals in the second period after setting up one of the first-period goals while McCarthy picked up his four assists in the middle stanza.

Guy Lash, Jim Malazdrewicz, Eugene O' Sullivan, Tom Roulston and Scott Hall scored the other Winnipeg goals.

Tom Cullen and Glen Hicks scored less than two minutes apart to cut the score to 4-2 in the second period before Winnipeg scored four unanswered goals in the final half of the period. Kim Davis scored the other Flin Flon goal late in the final period.

Flin Flon took 15 of 21 minor penalties and one of three majors.

Discord Rips Phillies

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Phillies are feuding among themselves with first baseman Dick Allen the focus of a controversy threatening to tear apart the National League Eastern Division champions.

Manager Danny Ozark is reported to have threatened to resign in July because he didn't like the way the front office handled Allen's disappearance for two games.

And Wednesday night in St. Louis, Ozark held a meeting before a game with the Cardinals, the Phils' last road game of the year.

He told the team he was unhappy with the way some players reacted since the Phils clinched the division flag with a Sunday victory in Montreal.

"It's hard to believe," Ozark told his team. "I've been so excited about winning the division I get up at seven in the morning just to feel good. But my payers don't seem excited."

Some players are upset that Allen left the club, apparently with no prior approval, after Sunday's doubleheader in Montreal and went home to Perkasie, Pa., instead of to St. Louis.

Reliever Tug McGraw said: "He (Allen) makes $250,000 a year . . . they said he's been hitting an hour and a half every day at home. What the hell does he think his teammates are doing out here in St. Louis?"

There also were complaints over the fact that five black players remained in the clubhouse during the second game of the Montreal doubleheader and held their own celebration.

Then there is Allen's ultimatum, told to a writer travelling with the team, that he would not participate in the playoffs or World Series unless veteran Tony Taylor, a longtime friend, is included on the 25-man post-season roster.

Taylor, 40, has been on and off the disabled list this year. A 19-year veteran, he has never been in a World Series and Allen thinks he deserves the chance.

If the Phils make Taylor eligible, they would have to take a pitcher off the roster.

"Much as I love Tony Taylor," said Ozark, "and as much as I'd like to see him play in a World Series. I'm not going to go to one of my pitchers and ask him to sit it out."

There were also reports of grumbling among some of the Phillies' black players because Jerry Martin, a white, started in right-field in place of Ollie Brown, a black, in the division-clinching game.

Ozark said Brown wasn't hitting and he knew "why he wasn't in the lineup.

Outfielder Garry Maddox, a black and one of the defensive mainstays of the team, said that during the meeting, 'McGraw got up and brought up all this race stuff. I couldn't believe it."

Maddox said, "somebody's sure been fooling me this season. I never saw a sign all year of any race problems. But now one of my teammates tells me we've got one. A lot of guys are upset by this."

McGraw said, "I don't see this as a strictly race thing. I see it as a thing where some guys—black and white—who really admire Dick and his independent ways are letting him influence their attitudes toward the club.

"A lot of us would like to be home celebrating," he said, "but the schedule says we've still got four games left to play."

Gorge, Colwood Pairings in Final

A team from Royal Colwood and a Gorge Vale pairing set off this morning at Glen Meadows in the final of the Victoria women's foursome tournament.

Pat Derry and Flo Chapman of Colwood had to work hard for their victory in Friday's semi-finals at Cedar Hill but Bea Lundgren and Sis Reid, the Gorge Vale team, found the going easier.

The Colwood partners had to go the 19th hole to defeat Elsie Saunders and Ivy Blunt, another Gorge combination that won the alternate-shot tournament in 1969 and again in 1974.

Mrs. Lundgren and Mrs. Reid scored a 5 and 4 triumph over Joan Perks and Kay Craig to Colwood.

Mrs. Derry and Mrs. Chapman were three down at one point early in the match but rallied strongly on the back nine to square accounts on the 17th hole.

The winners scored a par four on the first extra hole to advance into today's final.

Tournament medalists Vi Link and Betty Forgie of Victoria moved into the consolation final along with Eileen Ryan and Noreen Lea of Gorge Vale.

The Link-Forgie team defeated clubmates Muriel Osborough and Madge Nash, one up, while the Gorge combination downed Lorna Rooper and Phyllis Coxworth of Uplands, 4 and 2, in the semi-finals.

Hot Coho Returns Found Between Sooke, Oak Bay

"Coho" and "action" are synonymous words to most salmon fishermen around the south end of Vancouver Island this week.

Many limits of coho to 13 pounds have been landed on minnow, strip and hootchies at Secretary Island and a few have turned up at Otter and Sheringham points.

Fishermen are advised to try different depth combinations until one clicks because some have been caught shallow and others extremely deep.

Most catcses at Becher Bay, however, have been taken in 40 to 60 feet of water.

Ray Vater landed a 16:08-pounder Saturday off Beechey Head to top fishermen this week but the main part of the return seems to be from the vicinity of Bedford Island and Church Rock using strip, minnow, blue and white hootchies or green and white flashtails.

Coho to 15 pounds and winter chinooks to 13 are being landed in relatively even quantities at Pedder Bay.

Ray Goulet boated the 15-pound coho Tuesday off the Kelp Bed using a Buzz Bomb and Elva Hosie landed one of the few large chinooks still in the area — a 37 pounder — right in Pedder Bay at the weekend.

Anchovies and strip have worked best for trollers working off the kelp, in Race Pass and near Christopher Point.

Deeply-trolled bait is yielding coho to seven pounds between Brotchie Ledge and Albert Head.

More than 90 per cent of the catch off Oak Bay consists of coho to 12½ pounds with many limit catches coming from the area around Trial Island. Anchovies, minnows and strip have worked best when trolled right close to the botom.

A few chinooks to 12 pounds are coming in from the Flats.

A few chinooks to 18 pounds and coho in the seven-to-nine pound bracket have been biting Stingsildas, strip and green or grey hootchies off Wain Rock at Deep Cove.

Jack Sutherland wrote in recently advising the use of a blue flashtail, 30-inch leader and an Abe and Al flasher when fishing off Wain. He's also found a Coronation bucktail best to take coho in this vicinity.

Indian Bay is yielding coho to 12 pounds and the Bamberton shore is producing small chinooks and coho early in the morning.

Action has slowed down in Finlayson Arm but Stingsildas and Buzz Bombs cast around the north end of Goldstream Island have been catching a few jacks and coho.

Further up-Island, jacks and small chinooks are coming in off Cherry Point in Cowichan Bay and good catches of jacks are reported off Bold Bluff as well as Tent, Thetis and Kuper islands.

Deep Bay, Sangster Island and Lasqueti Island waters are yielding coho to 15 pounds on bucktails, Buzz Bombs and Stingsildas. Strip-casting has also been productive.

Winter chinooks to eight pounds are biting at Rainy and Holford bays at the mouth of Alberni Inlet.

Plan to be on the water between 1 and 3 p.m. if you want to try for coho to eight pounds off the end of Hornby Island and the Bates Beach area is yielding some coho to 12 pounds.

Mooched live herring are pulling in coho to 14 pounds off the kelp beds between the Government wharf in Campbell River and Big Rock.

Surfacegear is working best.

DISTRICT GOLF NOTES

Top Qualifier Will Miss Island Cup Competition

Cec Ferguson, the husky 26-year-old who turned professional in September, was clearly the most dominant golfer on Vancouver Island this year.

Ferguson compiled 627½ points to lead all qualifiers in the Island Cup competition for the Winspear Trophy.

However, Ferguson, who compiled all his points as an amateur, won't be participating in the Oct. 9-10 matches at Glen Meadows. He now is in California practising in preparation for an assault on the U.S. money circuit.

The end-of-season competition matches the 10 top amateurs against the Island's leading professionals in singles and foursomes play. Points are awarded on golfers' finishes in Island tournaments.

Jim Rutledge of Uplands and Cedar Hill will replace Ferguson on the amateur team.

Cowichan's Bill Wakeham led the professionals in points with 340.

PROFESSIONALS

1. Bill Wakeham, Cowichan, 340; 2. John Morgan, Uplands, 230; 3. Bob Hogarth, Royal Colwood, 125; 4. Bruce Rands, Uplands, and Dick Silverberg, Glen Meadows, 95; 6. Brian Carbery, Uplands, 90; 7. John Fraser, Gorge Vale, 75; 8. Mike Parker, Victoria, 45; 9. Sid Dahl, Comox, 39 1-3; 10. Jim Ferguson, Glen Meadows, 25.

AMATEURS

1. Cec Ferguson, Uplands, 627½; 2. Grant Milliken, Gorge Vale, 460; 3. Jeff Jones, Gorge Vale, 422½; 4. Art Carey, Royal Colwood, 405; 5. Brian Gandy, Cedar Hill, 387½; 6. Jim Rutledge, Cedar Hill and Uplands, 252½; 12. Ross Logan, Campbell River, 240; 13. Mike Mousseau, Royal Colwood, 195; 14. Alex Forward, Cowichan, 187½.

Club championship play is winding down. Two of the district's six 18-hole courses have declared their champions, three are at the semi-final stage and one is into the quarter-finals.

Uplands and Glen Meadows were the first to decide their champions.

Gorde Rands defeated Ted Pollard 7 and 6 in Uplands' 36-hole final while Marty Richards found the change in format to his liking and cruised home an easy winner at Glen Meadows.

The Meadows has switched from match to stroke play and Richards finished seven shots ahead of Reg. Effa. Richards finished with a closing, two-over-par 74 and a 54-hole total of 219. Effa fired a three-under 69 in his last round to take second with 226, one stroke ahead of John Russell.

Dave Russell was the handicap winner with a net 209.

Gorge Vale and Victoria Club will decide their finalists this weekend.

Steve Allen will face Stu Holroyd while Grant Milliken meets Urban Allen in the Gorge semi-finals. At Oak Bay, it's defending champion Carl Schwantje going against George Bigelow and Bill McPherson meeting John Hough, Jr.

Hough had to go 21 holes in order to defeat Bill Thompson in quarter-final play.

Defending club and city champion Brian Gandy, Tony Ritchie and Bill Coupar, a junior, are into the fours at Cedar Hill. Don Soberg and Dan McClintock will meet Sunday to determine the other semi-finalist.

Gandy defeated Jim Cook, Ritchie took care of Gary Doherty and Coupar beat Ron Forbes in quarter-final matches.

Surprises have featured the battling at Colwood. First off, several-times champion Lawrie Kerr failed to quality. Then runnerup medallist Emery Wondra was bounced by Richard Maslowski and Charlie Ireland knocked off veteran Vic Painter.

Joining Maslowski and Ireland in the eights are medallist Steve Hambleto, Don Wilson, Bruce Pelmore, Joe Evans, Doug Ledding and Murray Thomas.

BRIEFLY: Oak Bay assistant Mike Parker, who left Thursday for a Hawaiian holiday, had to score a hole-in-one for a net three . . . He put his tee shot off the seventh into the ocean, teed up again and four-ironed the ball into the hole for his par . . . Bona fide hole-in-one scorers in recent days were Al Westgate (4th) and John Fleming (7th) at Colwood; Ron Grant, on Cedar Hill's 15th; Stan Davies, on the 14th at Gorge Vale, and Wilf Evans, on the 15th at Glen Meadows . . .

CASSATA STARTS

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions said Thursday that Rick Cassata will start at quarterback hen the club plays Edmonton Eskimos in a Western Football Conference game here Saturday night.

Cassata hasn't been used by the Lions since he was acquired from Hamilton Tiger-Cats. Eric Guthrie has handled most of the Lions' quarterbacking chores.

The Lions also took Edgar Bell off the injured list and he'll replace Al Gallaher at guard. Gallaher will be put on the injured list because of strained knee ligaments.

Defensive back Floyd Hogan was cut after being on the Lions' injured list since training camp.

Maturity-Seeking Phil Plays a Shuffling Game

Times News Services

Vancouver Canucks' coach Phil Maloney, stung by his team's 9-1 loss to Toronto Maple Leafs in a National Hockey League exhibition on Wednesday has shuffled his troops.

Maloney packed off two rookies to Tulsa of the Central League and juggled two lines in an effort to get some of that "maturity" he had been expecting from Canucks this season.

The Canucks, who have two ties and two losses to show for four games against NHL opposition, continue their preseason schedule with two games against Los Angeles Kings tonight and Saturday.

Canucks and Kings square off tonight in Vancouver and meet again in Victoria's Memorial Arena on Saturday.

Dropped from the Vancouver roster Thursday were rookies Glen Richardson and Sid Versey. Neither had been expected to stick with the Canucks.

Maloney also went to work on his forward lines, leaving only the Mike Walton-Rick Blight-Don Lever unit intact.

He shifted John Gould from right to left wing on a line with Chris Oddleifson. Rod Sedlebauer was dropped and Dennis Ververgaert moved to left wing.

Sedlebauer joins Garry Monahan and Gerry O'Flaherty on another line. The big surprise was the shifting of Monahan from left wing to centre.

Meanwhile, in exhibition play Thursday, Pittsburgh Penguins scored all their goals against former teammate Andy Brown and acored a 6-4 victory oyer Indianapolis Racers of the World Association.

In other exhibition games Thursday night involving NHL teams, Los Angeles Kings and Cleveland Crusaders played to a 2-2 tie, Montreal Canadiens beat Philadelphia Flyers 8-2, New York Rangers and Boston Bruins played to a 2-2 tie, Minnesota North Stars downed St. Louis Blues 4-2 and Eric Vail scored three goals as Atlanta Flames beat Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association 8-4.

In a game involving WHA teams, Winnipeg Jets beat Calgary Cowboys 7-1 at Brandon, Man.

Jim Roberts scored an empty-net goal to clinch Minnesota's win over the Blues. Roland Eriksson, Pierre Jarry and Dwight Bialowas scored the other North Stars goals while Jamie Masters and defenceman Rod Seiling scored for St. Louis.

Belmont Blanked

Gordie Reading, the league's top goaltender in 1974 and runner-up last year, posted his third straight shutout of the season Thursday as Spectrum blanked host Belmont 5-0 in a Greater Victoria High School Soccer League match.

The speedy Belmont squad failed to score because of big saves by Reading on several occasions.

Reading played for Reynolds two seasons ago and allowed only 13 goals in 16 games. Last year, he transferred to Spectrum and gave up 16 goals in 13 games, second only to his replacement at Reynolds, Tony Den Otter, who allowed only nine goals.

Rick Zahariot, Mike Collis and Pat Going scored to give Spectrum a 3-0 lead at halftime. After the break, Barry Jones connected and Collis notched his sixth tally of the season.

Detroit Signs Sunter

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Lions of the National Football League have signed kicker Ian Sunter, who was released before the 1976 season by Hamilton Tiger-Cats after four years in the Canadian Football League.

General Manager Russ Thomas says Sunter will play Sunday against Green Bay Packers and is expected to handle kickoff duties.

The 23-year-old, six-foot native of Burlington, Ont., joined the Ticats out of high school in 1972 and kicked the winning field goal in the Grey Cup Game against Saskatchewan Roughriders in his rookie year. He scored 445 points in his four seasons and averaged 56 yards on kickoffs.

Jailed for Life

TORONTO (CP) — Ernest Caron, 47, was sentenced to life imprisonment Thursday for attempting to kidnap Signy Eaton, daughter of the chairman of the board of Eaton's of Canada Ltd.

Caron, a native of France who has maintained silence since his arrest in June, remained mute throughout a pre-sentence hearing.

He was convicted two weeks ago of attempting to kidnap the Eaton girl June 15.

Judge Lloyd Graburn heard testimony from a number of witnesses before sentencing the Toronto laborer.

One witness, a Montreal policeman, told court that Caron shot him three times during a 1959 bank robbery.

Constable Donat Jodoin testified he was shot in the chest and abdomen and identified Caron as his assailant.

Court was told Caron served five years of a 17-year sentence for the attempted murder of Constable Jodoin before being deported.

Sgt. Robert Dougall testified that Caron was released from prison in July, 1964, on condition he stay out of Canada.

He said the man was placed on a ship and deported, but he obtained a French passport in the name of Ernest Grillet and flew back to Canada within five weeks.

Round the World In Homemade Plane

OSHKOSH, Wis. — Don Taylor, 57, of Hemut, Calif., Thursday completed what officials said was the first round-the-world trip in a homebuilt airplane.

Taylor, a retired United States air force colonel who has been a pilot for 38 years, arrived at Wittman Field here Thursday.

"I spent about 800-plus hours in my 'Victoria '76' airplane and took 39 days to do it," he said of the 23,000-mile trip in the two-seat Thorp T-18.

The plane, which has a 21-foot wingspan and a 180-horsepower engine, was built by Taylor over a three-year period ending in 1971.

Taylor, who left Oshkosh on Aug. 1, originally planned to return by Sept. 9.

He had a 15-day layover, however, while he straightened out red tape with U.S. navy officials who refused to let him takeoff after he landed illegally on Midway Island in the Pacific.

At the time, he said he didn't care how restricted the field on Midway was, it was the only place to land for a thousand miles.

ATHENS — Multi-millionairess Christina Onassis is thinking of divorcing her second husband, 32-year-old Alexandros Andreadis, Greek Orthodox Church sources said Thursday.

The sources said the couple, married in the summer of 1975, has filed a petition to the archbishopric of Athens asking religious authorities to help in a reconciliation, — usually only a formality to adhere to Church rulings prior to applying for divorce.

LOS ANGELES — Financier Bernard Cornfeld, founder of the defunct Investors Overseas Services Ltd., was sentenced Thursday to three months in prison for defrauding the telephone company with a "blue box," designed to skirt long distance tolls.

OAKLAND, Calif — Eldridge Cleaver, Black Panther who returned to the United States earleir this year after living in exile in Europe for eight years, will be tried in January on assault charges resulting from a 1968 gun battle with police.

CHICAGO — A Glenview man returned to his blazing home to rescue his pet parrot but did not tell a guest sleeping in an upstairs bedroom that the house was on fire, a circuit court suit filed by the woman's estate contends.

The $400,000 suit filed Wednesday against George and Kathleen Newell by lawyer David Epstein, representing the estate of Joni Marie Dini, 20, said Newell first took his parrot from the room where the fire broke out and then went outside to escape the smoke and heat.

SNOWDON
. . . hard to hide

NEW YORK — Louise Lasser, star of the television comedy-soap opera Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman, says she is seeing a psychiatrist rather than attending drug rehabilitation classes after her arrest for possession of cocaine.

MONTREAL — Lord Snowdon, Princess Margaret's estranged husband, says he craves privacy and has spent much of his stay in Montreal attempting to avoid attention.

He has been in Montreal since Monday on a photographic assignment that will take him to Vancouver, Thunder Bay, Ont., Japan, Australia and Southeast Asia.

"Being recognized by people often creates problems for my work because it changes a situation — people react differently," he said in an interview.

LOS ANGELES — Singer Bing Crosby returns to Broadway Dec. 7, 45 years after he last appeared there. Bing Crosby and Friends, a musical show with singer Rosemary Clooney, will open a two-week run at the Uris Theatre in New York City, a spokesman for Crosby said Thursday.

DUD 'KILLER' SUED

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (UPI) — The craftsman was not what he purported to be, did not render the services contracted for and so Dr. John Werner wants his money back.

Werner, a radiologist, pleaded no contest in August to a charge of soliciting the murder of his wife, Carmelita, 38. He was fined $2,000 and put on three years probation.

Werner was arrested after he gave an undercover policeman, posing as an assassin, $1,000 as a down payment to carry out the killing.

Werner filed suit Friday, demanding his $1,000 back.

CHARGE WATERED DOWN?

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — RCMP had difficulty deciding what charge to lay against a Medicine Hat man who was apprehended urinating on the hood of a police cruiser.

On Aug. 13, an RCMP constable noticed a group standing around his car parked in front of a corner cafe in Drumheller, Alta. As he approached, the group dispersed except for Patrick Carry, 20, who was "urinating profusely" on the constable's car.

Carry appeared in provincial court Thursday and was fined $50 for the offence. The charge? Unlawful littering.

To Sit or Stand Is Grueling Issue

LONDON (AP) — The British pound may be ailing, unemployment may be rising, and Prime Minister Callaghan has warned a dictatorship may follow if Britain's tottering economy is not shored up quickly.

But the country's top people have weightier matters to concern them, if the correspondence columns of the August London Times is anything to go by. The question worrying them is:

Do you eat your breakfast porridge sitting down, standing up, or walking about?

Porridge is made by mixing oatmeal with water and milk into a sort of gruel. The Scots claim it as one of their national dishes and fiercely insist it should be flavored with salt— only the effete English use sugar, they say.

The controversy was started last Monday when David Elias, writing from the English Midlands to The Times— always a sounding board for the British— quoting a passage from L. P. Hartley's novel The Go-Between, which says, "The men walked about to eat their porridge. This was de rigeur: only cads ate porridge sitting down."

"Was this a purely English reaction to porridge, or was Scots consumption similarly peripatetic?", asked Elias, straightfaced.

Eagerly, the Scots leaped into the argument. Certainly porridge eating is peripatetic in the best houses, wrote June, Lady Aberdeen. And moreover, milk is sometimes kept in a separate bowl into which the spoonful of porridge is dipped, she added.

Other Scots gave three different reasons for the porridge walk-about. Maj. John Fizgerald wrote that he had been told the ancient custom was to eat porridge standing besides a window—which made it easier to leap out, onto a horse, and off to one of the forays the Scots were so keen on.

R. M. Maxtone Graham said the custom arose in the days "when Highlanders used to stab each other on the back a good deal, especially at mealtimes. It was then prudent to eat standing up with back to the wall."

Dancers Invited to Ont.

The Anna Wyman Dance Theatre which performs here Saturday at McPherson Playhouse will appear in an Ontario Arts Council-sponsored showcase in Toronto on Oct. 16.

A powerful piece of choreography by Anna Wyman entitled Undercurrents, set to Murray Schafer's North-White, will be the company's showcase performance. It is also included in the Victoria program.

Performances in London, Ont., and Hamilton, will follow before the company returns to Vancouver.

At Saturday's appearance, two of Wyman's newest and much-praised works, Quicksilver and Deflection, will be danced as well as the comical Number One, and the Emily Carr-inspired Klee Wyck.

All the choreography for this disciplined company of eight is the innovative creation of its director-founder.

Third Time Unlucky

HOLLYWOOD (Reuter) — Universal Studios, encouraged by the box office success of two previous jet plane dramas, is putting its disaster-beset jet of Airport into the air for the third time.

Producers and cast of the new film Airport '77 say these movies, rather than making cinema-goers nervous about taking planes, probably relieve their fear of flying.

Actress Lee Grant, one of the stars of the film, who says she is terrified of planes, says of the movies: "They are a release. They release a lot of fears that people have—fear of the unknown, fear of planes."

Veteran actress Ollivia de Havilland, another star of the film, says: "the main thing is that we know that accidents are extremely rare so that we can safely go through the vicarious terror of a fictionalized accident on film."

Producer William Faye, who also produced Airport '75, says: "I think these films are escapism and they provide a certain feeling of relief too because moviegoers say, 'Thank God I wasn't on that plane.'"

In the latest film the jet will collide with an oil derrick and sink into the Bermuda triangle.

In Airport the plane was threatened with a hijacking and in Airport '75 the giant jet was holed in mid-air by a crash with a smaller plane.

The Boeing Company, whose 747 jet starred in both disaster epics, is not too happy that the plane is being cast in the leading role.

"Any implications that our

"Any implications that our airplane would fall out of the spokesman John Wheeler said in Seattle.

"The airplane's safety record is impressive considering the length of time it has been in service and the number of flights it has made.

"But these movie people take their liberties. That's show business."

Although the same jet will be used, there will be a change of crew. Dean Martin was the pilot in the first movie, Charlton Heston in the last and Jack Lemmon will be at the controls this time.

Executive producer Jennings Lang says the Airport films are not sequels but are all loosely inspired by the best-selling Arthur Hailey novel.

"They have different stories. We're just making another adventure picture in the air."

The only actor to survive all three pictures is George Kennedy who has been adopted as a sort of mascot by the Universal production team.

Miss Grant, who plays a trouble-making middle-aged woman passenger, says she had to take airsickness pills when she went on the mock-up plane on the movie set.

"It's better now," she said. "But at the beginning it was just awful because I was in a plane that was doing all the things I was afraid a plane would do."

Asked if she had ever been on a plane during an untoward incident, she said: "For a person like me, a little jolt is an untoward incident."

Miss de Havilland, as a romantic old woman who meets an old flame on the doomed flight, says: "These days flying joins us together. So many people do it."

She says the disaster films may actually serve a useful purpose of telling people how to behave in a plane accident.

"We are always being told about these things but we only half listen."

BOILED, BAGGED PICKLED AND JAGGED

SPRINGFIELD, Mass (AP)— What do the words "loaded," "pickled" and "plastered" have in common? Aside from meaning exactly the same thing, they happen to be part of the longest list of synonyms in Webster's Collegiate Thesaurus.

Dr. Maire Weir Kay, editor of the volume just published by G. and C. Merriam Co. here, says, "intoxicated" has more synonyms than any other entry in the book.

The 46 listed, included "blind," "boiled," "fried," "juiced," "oiled," "pickled," "jagged," "polluted," "smashed," "stinking," "stinko," sozzled," "tanked" and "zonked."

There are the polite words like "tiddly," "squiffed," "lit" and "tight," and some not so nice. And there are the odd ones: "capernoited," "deleerit," "half-seas over," and "spifflicated."

Idiomatically there is "full as a tick," "three sheets to the wind," "under the table" and "in the bag."

"It is an odd fact of linguistic life that a word with many synonyms adds more as time goes on," Dr. Kay said. "You would think it might be the other way around. Each generation makes up new adjectives for 'intoxicated,' for instance and the list grows."

And a close runner-up in the synonym race? Well, there are 41 synonyms for "insane" ifncluding "batty," "bonkers," "bugs," "crackers."

NEW LEASE ON LIFE was given Michael Spaccarelli, two, of Brookhaven, Penn., as a result of open heart surgery in Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children to correct a hole in the heart. Doris Spaccarelli, the boy's mother, said the family could not afford to have the operation done in the U.S.

BELGIAN WIVES 'EQUAL'

BRUSSELS (AP) — Belgian wives gained full equality with their husbands Tuesday when new laws replaced those dating to the 18th century.

They no longer need their husbands' agreement to go to court, open a bank account, rent a safe deposit box, apply for a job or cash their own paycheques.

Husbands also lost the right to decide on the family's place of residence and manage its properties, including their wives' wealth.

The marriage laws, adopted by parliament in July after a decade of debate, provide that in event of separation or divorce, family interest as a whole will be taken into account, not the interest of any individual member. For example, if the family home belongs to only husband or wife the agreement of both is needed to sell it.

The new laws also establish the solidarity of the couple—meaning both are responsible for debts incurred by one of them. They also enable husband or wife to change the wedding contract after marriage.

Don't Pass Up Auto Wreckers

caveat emptor

By LYNNE GORDON

The high prices of new cars and the staggering increase in the costs of automobile upkeep are pushing more people into dealing with auto wreckers.

This is a business devoted mainly to the sale of used parts salvaged from old or wrecked cars. The cars may be bought by the wrecker from insurance companies, at auctions or by private sale; sometimes they are picked up as abandoned derelicts on the highways.

No matter how severely damaged, some of a car's 15,000 individual parts are always serviceable.

Consumers have always had the mistaken impression that all auto wreckers were the same, lumping them together in their minds with scrap yards and junk yards. But recently, the image of the auto wrecker has begun to change. Many of them prefer to be called auto suppliers, parts recyclers or auto dismantlers. Some, though, do proudly cling to the name, auto wrecker.

No matter what they're called, there can be a big difference in the way they cooperate and how many functions they perform.

Certainly, the demand for used parts is on the increase as the availability of new parts diminished.

It makes a lot of sense to buy used parts to extend the life of a good vehicle because prices can be anywhere from one-third to one-half off the price of a new part. Don't hesitate to comparison shop. Wreckers have no limit to what they can charge, and prices do vary from outlet to outlet.

Used parts are always sold as assemblies — as complete as necessary in order to make a repair, or to make it easier for the do-it-yourselfer.

Your search for a specific part may take you to a variety of places. Many of the yards are eyesores and can be dangerous for walking in. Usually, you will be told to go out and find what you want, particularly if it's not an item in demand. Watch out for cars heaped precariously on top of each other in muddy areas.

The part you want may still be in the car — used, untested, dirty and without a guarantee. Watch to see that the part you want from a car is not butchered by the yard worker when he is removing it. If you are told that, "this part works" make sure that this means it will also work in YOUR car. Unless you know what kind of accident the wreck was in, you may be purchasing something of questionable quality and may end up with a part that can only serve as a stop-gap.

Also beware of the cursory statement: "Yeah, that will fit": A part that doesn't fit properly can create major problems in your car by affecting other parts right down the line. It's a good idea to carry the part around with you when seeking a wrecking yard replacement.

A currently hot controversy centres around the advantages of a used engine, as opposed to a rebuilt one. Many experts feel that it's always best to buy an "original" engine because a rebuilt one can never have the same specifications as one built by the manufacturer, no matter how skillful the rebuilder.

The wrecking industry has been trying to clean up its image, even to fixing up its yards, and keeping more controlled inventories of stock.

LONGEVITY GAP WIDENS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The social stress of a daily job, long thought to be responsible for the susceptibility of men to heart disease, has not had the same effect on women, says an expert in coronary medicine.

Dr. William Hazzard, a researcher at the University of Washington, told a symposium of the American Heart Association Wednesday that although more and more women are facing the pressures of the working world, they still have a "remarkable resistance to coronary disease" and now outlive men longer than ever.

Hazzard said another popular theory, that the female hormone estrogen helped combat heart disease, has recently been discounted.

"For a while, we were even giving estrogen to men in hopes of preventing a second heart attack. It didn't work."

Aside from old age, being male is the biggest contributing factor to heart disease in Western society, Hazzard said.

Men are four times more likely than women to suffer heart disease in middle age, he said. The longevity gap between the sexes—a women's average life span in the U.S. is now 76, compared with 68 for men—is ever-widening.

When heart disease rates began to decline in the last few years, Hazzard said the decline among women was much more dramatic than among men.

Certain factors—the use of birth control pills, for example—increase the chance of heart disease among women, Hazzard said, but the effect cannot yet be measured accurately.

"It may turn out that women who took the pill tend to die younger but we won't know for many years."

He said the study of that factor will be complicated because women who take the pill tend to smoke cigarettes, and smoking also contributes to heart disease.

'Get What You Expect —Not What You Want'

SEATTLE (AP) — Affirmation is the key, says Lou Tice, a human potential peddler of the Dale Carnegie ilk.

Imagine — vividly, completely and frequently — that what you want to do or to be already exists. Then it will come true, he preaches.

Tice, ex-football coach, self-made man and head of a multi-million-dollar corporation — Pacific Institute — uses affirmation personally:

"I am a magnetic personality," he says.

"I am great at my job of motivating others."

The trick, he says, is to affirm consistently and visually. Tice says he affirms in bed, while he shaves, at his office, while driving his car or in his self-imposed "alpha state of deep relaxation.

"You don't get what you want," he tells audiences. "You get what you expect."

In the 4½ years since he founded the institute, Tice has cultivated a list of Northwest corporations which regularly send their employees to be inspired. The Weyerhauser Co. sends selected executives. Foster & Marshal sends trainee stockbrokers. College and professional athletes also come.

For $40 a head, Tice will give a one-day seminar to any size group. He uses anecdotes, analogies and repetition in his lectures, as well as body language and relaxing techniques. For $500, a couple can have Tice all to themselves for three days at a resort.

Not everyone who uses the affirmation technique becomes an unqualified success.

"I was affirming that I was fair and just," said one man. "Then I read a guy out, said some really mean things. I went home and just broke up."

Tice says a "balance" must be maintained in using his technique. Trying to be a sensitive person. He's his own testimonial.

"You ought to be around me just to see how content I am," he says.

The Variations in Ulcer Diets

your health

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Every few years I have an attack of stomach ulcer. When this happens I go on a diet of pureed foods and frequent feedings of milk and cream, and I feel better. Now I hear the new way of treating ulcers is with a normal diet — Mr. T.M., Penn.

Dear Mr. M.:

For many decades, ulcers of the stomach and the duodenum (small intestine) were treated with a "sippy" diet, named after the doctor who originated it.

The purpose of this diet was to neutralize any excess acid that would be present in the stomach juices. In addition, antacid solutions or tablets were used to counteract the acid.

Putting the stomach "at rest" and decreasing the active secretion of gastric juices is the ultimate purpose of any form of treatment for ulcers.

For many people, a Sippy diet has been remarkably effective. As the patient progresses, more bland food is added to the diet until a normal diet is established, and the ulcer is considered healed.

There now is a growing tendency to treat stomach ulcers with less fear that a normal diet might be harmful. If this is used, the elimination of spicy foods, coffee, tea, alcohol and tobacco is essential as with a Sippy diet.

More and more, doctors who specialize in the field of gastroenterology (diseases of the stomach and intestines) are far more liberal in their diets than they formerly were. They believe that three normal, reasonable meals a day, coupled with medication and antacids, may counterbalance all of the hydrochloric acid that pours into the stomach and plays such an important role in the cause, the control and the cure of stomach ulcers.

There is a temptation for patients to depart quickly from a routine of treatment that has been effective for them. You have apparently flourished on the routine, bland Sippy diet. Since this is effective, I would not, without very specific direction of your doctor, change the diet that has been so beneficial to you.

I notice that you say that you "go on" a diet when you have ulcer pains. Does this intimate the fact that you do this without the supervision of your doctor? If you do, you are doing yourself a great injustice.

Ulcers should be treated by physicians. They are aware of the value of the old and the new variations of ulcer diets. Only with your doctor's permission would I shift from one to the other.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS'

'Little Guys' Do Better At Solving Energy Crisis

The big cororations and government agencies get the headlines every time they announce another improbable mega-buck "solution" to the "energy crisis." But so far, it's the little guys who've been building the hardware that works.

Jon Hammond was born 31 years ago in Richmond, Calif., and not long ago found himself with a bachelor's degree in landscape architecture, a master's in ecology, and working as a teaching fellow at the University of California at Davis. It was then, thanks to his degrees and his experience in his chosen fields, that the city of Davis asked Jon to help prepare an official energy conservation policy for the town.

Hammond — along with Marshall Hunt, Lauren Neubauer, and Dick Cramer — brought forth a milestone study entitled "A Strategy for Energy Conservation: Proposed Energy Conservation and Solar Utilization Ordinance."

Much of the resport dealt with simple "we can do it now" ideas that the residents of Davis could use immediately to make their homes, neighborhoods and whole town more pleasant and more energy efficient. But in many readers' opinions, the real zinger in the new Davis ordinance is the chapter on solar energy prepared (at Hammond's request) by Steve Baer.

Baer reported on several simple, low-cost solar systems that he thought were especially suited to the Davis area. The chapter proved to be the undoing of Jon Hammond, for he soon began building some solar heating-cooling systems of his own.

Hammond began with the old farmhouse that he and his wife lived in. "We completely renovated the place," he says. "Re-sided, reroofed and insulated it. We put insulated shutters on the windows, too. And then we replaced the whole south side of the building with a drum wall."

(A "drum wall" is exactly what it says it is — a collection of water-filled barrels stacked up against the inside of a transparent wall with a movable shade on the outside. The drum wall can either disperse heat from the sun through living quarters or move heat from the house outside, depending on the season and the position of the shade.)

All in all, the Hammonds spent approximately $10,000 remodelling the frame house. Only a small portion of that amount was directly paid out for the solar heating system, however, since one of the main components — the barrels — was free.

Jon estimates that his renovated dwelling now derives about 80 to 90 per cent of its winter heat from the sun. "We haven't run any really controlled tests on the place," he says, "but I can tell you this: two winters ago — before the conversion — we kept both a gas heater and a Franklin fireplace stoked up to maximum output all the time, and we never were comfortable. We just couldn't keep warm.

"Last winter, though, after the remodelling and without the gas heater at all, we were always warm . . . and we only burned one-third of a cord of wood in the Franklin. We hardly used the fireplace except for December and January and the last blaze we needed at all was on February 6!"

Inspired by this success, Hammond let it be known that he was available to plan and-or construct other energy-conserving and sun-tempered buildings. It wasn't long before a Davis professor asked him to design a solar-heated and-cooled house from the ground up.

"We used a modification of Harold Hay's Sky Therm on that one," Jon says. "The system is nothing but some big, galvanized steel tanks built right into the ceilings of the main rooms.

"The containers hold 300 cubic feet — seven tons — of water and are covered by thin sheets of plastic. They're either exposed to the sun and the outside atmosphere or protected from them by raising and lowering a large section of the building's roof like a big lid.

"In addition, the bottom of that lid acts as a huge reflector, to direct even more sunlight onto the water when the roof is up."

How well the Sky Therm radiates warmth into the rooms below during cold weather remains to be seen (Jon figures the house will be 95 per cent solar-heated), but the system has already proven it can "air condition" the professor's house during the summer. At the end of a three-day spell of 105 degree F weather last July, the interior of the building registered a peak of only 74 degrees. Later in the season, two solid days of 112 degrees outside brought the inside temperature up to just 78 degrees.

That's not bad for a 1,200-square-foot house costing $27,000. With gas, oil and other fuels now high and going higher, this residence will pay for itself in energy savings alone within a very few years!

Jon currently operates a consulting firm, Living Systems, out of his home. One of the company's main projects at present is the design of a solar house for some folks in Chico, Calif. It's also planning a "mass production" sun-heated and colled residence for a Davis contractor and expects soon to be awarded funding for the development of a couple of "low-cost, energy-conserving homes that eventually will be erected in Davis. And, during its spare time, Living Systems is doodling up a "partly underground, solar-heated" workshop for itself.

Living Systems has also been retained to do a version of the Davis ordinance for both Indio and Chico, Calif., and the company recently completed a most interesting study of a proposed nuclear installation for the city of Sacramento.

"They want to spend one billion dollars putting that nuclear plant in," says Jon, "and they claim that they've just got to have it. Yet our analysis shows that if we spend $2,600 on every residence in Sacramento to make the town more energy conserving, we can save as much power as that plant will ever generate . . . at a total cost of only half a billion! We've got to quit thinking that the answer is always more."

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN and JOEL: My mother-in-law, now 98, has what is called a "Burn Plant." She brought the plant from Nebraska many years ago, so it is definitely a member of the family. My wife used the juice from a leaf of the plant to alleviate slight burns on her hands and arms. The result was virtually immediate relief. We felt your readers would enjoy knowing about this very special plant.—R.R.

DEAR R.R.: Yes, indeed! You are undoubtedly referring to the Aloe Vera, a succulent, which is one of the most valuable medicinal plants. The Indians had many uses for the Aloe Vera, and we can learn so much from their infinite knowledge of the earth's secrets and wonders.

Today we can utilize this plant in the same ways. Its wonderful healing properties for burns are legend. By removing an entire leaf, it can be used as a hair-conditioner, for facials, for scar-tissue.

Many natural lotions made from the extract can be purchased through your local health food store. No home need be without an Aloe Vera; ours certainly isn't. We thank you for bringing it to the attention of all plant lovers.

WOOD-PACKED BREAD CLAIMED DIET TREAT

SPOKANE (AP) — A wood pulp derivative being used in a new bread will help dieters in their calorie-counting, says officials of International Telephone and Telegraph's Continental Baking Co.

Steve Mongelluzo, manager of ITT Continental Baking's Spokane plant, said Tuesday that his company will market a new bread called Fresh Horisons. Company officials claim the bread has 30 per cent fewer calories than a regular loaf.

Experimenters have found a way to replace some of the shortening and flour in a normal bread with powdered cellulose, a wood pulp derivative, said ITT spokesman Neil McReynolds. He said the cellulose gives bread a high fibre and nutrition content.

Willful Wine

NEW YORK (AP) — Sherry is among the oldest of wines.

According to Rand McNally's "Entertaining With Wine," all sherries, which are made by a continuous blending of old and new wines, century after century, fall into two basic categories: the light, dry finos and the darker, robust olorosos.

The vintner can't plan which type he will make — the wine decides and develops for itself. The wine maker, according to the book, must simply watch, wait and accept.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Ever since my wife got pregnant, she's been craving Argo laundry starch. She's been eating an awfull lot of it and says it calms her nerves.

I'm afraid that all that laundry starch might hurt my wife or her unborn baby, but she insists it's harmless!

How would you feel, Abby, if someone you loved ate laundry starch by the box?

HARVEY.

DEAR HARVEY: I'd be worried stiff. Insist that she tell her doctor about this craving.

DEAR ABBY: After I had my seventh baby I asked my doctor to tie my tubes so I wouldn't have any more children.

Well, that was three years ago and yesterday my husband announced that he'd made an appointment with a urologist to have a vasectomy! It sure sounds to me like he has another woman in his life!

Maybe I'm just dumb, but I can't understand why HE has to have a vasectomy when there's no danger of getting ME pregnant.

Do you think he's off his rocker, or he just plain doesn't like kids?

Please don't use my name. Four of my kids can read.

"OVER BEARING"

DEAR OVER: No matter what your husband's faults may be, "gambling" isn't one of them.

DEAR ABBY: For the past three months, I've been dating a guy I'll call Brad. He's 27 and I'm 24.

Brad has a good business, so I know he's not hurting financially. In fact, he's very well off.

Well, he is the tightest man I've ever known. Abby, he's never taken me to a really nice restaurant. It's always a quick hamburger somewhere, and his idea of an entertaining evening is going to one of his friends' apartments and watching TV.

He took me to an opera once only because someone gave him some tickets. I work and am not exactly loaded, but I find myself leaving tips at the diner, paying for parking and "lending" him a dollar or two — which he never pays back.

If I ask him to pick up a pack of cigarettes for me, he'll hand them to me and say, 'G'ee, cigarettes have sure gone up — they're 65 cents a pack." (Translation: "You owe me, so pay up.")

I enjoy his company, but his stinginess irritates me. Should I continue seeing him, hoping he'll change, mention my feelings or just call it quits? — MS. F.

DEAR MS. F.: Mention your feelings and don't pull any punches! If he cares about you, he'll make an effort to change his ways. If he doesn't — who needs him?

DEAR ABBY: I am a 19-year-old single girl who is engaged to be married.

I decided to go on the birth control pill, so I got a prescription from my doctor and had it filled at the drug store near the place I work.

A few months later, I found out that the lady who works at the drug store where I got my pills had told several people (including my fiance's relatives) that I was on the Pill!

Do you think it would do any good to report this to the manager of the drug store! I am plenty ticked off about this.

Don't tell me to confront the employee with this because she would just deny it. — TICKED OFF

DEAR TICKED: Report the employee to the manager. She had no business disclosing YOUR business.

DEAR ABBY: VIRGINIA BEACH READER asked how one should introduce someone with whom he (or she) is shacking up, and you suggested "friend."

I object! I have many close friends, female and male, with whom I have never slept, and I would like to keep thinking of them as friends, thank you. I see no reason why I should change my vocabulary to cover my friendships just because social mores are changing.

I agree that "mistress," with its connotations of being "kept," has become outdated since today many mistresses keep themselves. And I certainly agree we need a conversational word to cover situations when a man and woman live and travel together but are not married.

I submit that it would be better to change the connotation of "mistress," and use "mister" (an otherwise useless word) as the male counterpart, than warp the meaning of "friend."

If we need another word, how about "bedmate" or "roomie"?

Abby, read the adage, "Make new friends but keep the old, etc." with your revised meaning of "friends." And then offer VIRGINIA BEACH READER a better word.

TOM.

DEAR TOM: Objection noted.

CALLUS SOFTENER

By NORMAN H. STARK

A callus is a hard thickened area that builds up on the skin as a result of pressure or friction. Writing as much as I do, I'm constantly plagued with calluses forming on my finger. Feet are also frequently subject to callus formation due to shoes that do not fit properly.

Annoying calluses are made up of epidermis, the tough hard material that builds up on the skin. But they can be easily removed. Here's how to do it at low cost.

You'll need two cups castor oil, one-half cup paraffin wax, one tablespoon white soap chips or powder, and one teaspoon sodium thiosulfate (found at a photographic supply store). Put the oil, wax and soap in the top section of a double boiler and heat until mixed. Cool down to about 100 degrees Fahrenheit and add the sodium thiosulfate with stirring. Store in plastic or glass jars. To use, apply to callus before bedtime (the consistency will be like a heavy grease) and wrap with gauze to protect bed clothing. Wash off with hot water in the morning. Repeat as necessary.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Diet Helps Hungry

NEW YORK (AP) — A total of 40,423 pounds of fat was converted into $60,000 by dieters in the United States and Canada who lost weight to earn money to feed starving children in countries that CARE, International serves.

More than 1,000 overweight persons participated in a Diet Workshop Lose-a-Thon for Care, earning the money by enlisting sponsors to make a contribution for each pound lost.

Murtaugh, 59, is expected to retire after season ends this weekend.

Women's Sailing Showdown Here

AROUND OUR SHORES

Women of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, with Beth Van Dyke as co-ordinator, are getting ready to host one of the major sailing events of the year.

It's the Canadian Yachting Association's national women's championships, to be held Oct. 8-11.

Ten crews from five regions — two from British Columbia, two from the Prairies, two from Ontario, two from Quebec and another two from the Maritimes — will arrive here on the Thursday with the Friday being spent practising for the big weekend.

Representing B.C. will be Judy Day with Annabelle Martin as crew, Pam Gordon and Averil Foley, all of Vancouver.

Racing will begin each day at 9:30 a.m., three races being sailed on the Saturday and Sunday with two more scheduled for the Monday.

The competitors will be using the club's Flying Juniors, complete with spinnakers.

Last weekend's poor winds and fog wiped out all local races except for the RVYC's Laser sailors on Saturday.

Bob Britton won two races, placing second in another, which was won by Doug Taylor-Lee. In Bob's first win, he edged Peter Copeland and Dave Richards for top honors. In his second win he was followed by Barry Wright and Peter. Dave managed to get a third in the race won by Doug.

There'll be series racing again this Saturday for all centreboarders, starting at 1:30 p.m.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, has series racing scheduled for Sunday. Centreboarders will begin at 10:30 a.m. while Sailerettes and cruising class boats will get their start at 10 a.m.

In the Sidney area, the Canoe Bay Sailing Club has another six-miler set for Sunday. The start will be 10 a.m. in the vicinity of the government wharf.

The word from Australia this week is that Perth businessman Alan Bond will take another crack at the America's Cup next year.

Bond's two designers, Australian Bob Miller and Dutchman John Valentijin describe the $750,000 aluminum 12-metre, to be built in a Perth factory, as a "people's boat."

She will work closely with the French and Swedish entries, competing in an elimination series.

"We have a common goal to wrest the cup from the United States," Bond says. "A joint effort to tune up the best of the foreign challengers is in the interest of all."

The America's Cup, oldest prize in international yacht racing, has been held by the Americans since the inaugural race in 1851.

The latest venture of Gerald Kidd's Pacific Yachting is off the ground. It's Canadian Yachting, a magazine being put out in Toronto in an effort to capture the eastern market.

Designed to interest both power-boaters and rag-haulers, the first edition appeared in September. Although it won't be sold in B.C. stores, it will be available by subscription.

Canadian Yachting is a welcome addition in a field dominated by American publications. In format, particularly the cover, it bears a marked resemblance to the Vancouver magazine.

SHORT TACKS — It's literally impossible to keep an enthusiastic sailor shorebound, even in the Arctic. On a visit to Yellowknife last week I was fascinated to watch a lone sailboat making her way across the vast expanse of Great Slave Lake two evenings in a row, one of which was a particularly gusty one.

I wonder if the skipper will still be out there when the snow sets in, trying his hand at windsurfing.

Big Six All-Stars Topple Athletics

Victoria Athletics, the defending champions couldn't hold the South Island Big Six Hockey League's all-stars Thursday.

Sparked by players from Juan de Fuca Merchants and Western Home Buckaroos, the all-stars recovered from an early 4-1 deficit to edge Athletics 8-6 in the annual all-star game at Pearkes Arena.

Merchants' Al Goldade scored twice while Buckaroo netminders Steve Kishkan and John Lindsay combined to turn away 34 shots to figure strongly in the victory.

Perry Head and Rod Hunter of Juan de Fuca also contributed goals while George Fuller of the Bucks; Bob Martin and Les Bergman, both of Victoria Maple Leafs, and Neil Sanders of Lake Cowichan added the others.

Gord Neilson, with two, Dave Parenteau, Ross Swanton, Brian Hamilton and Dave Williams connected for Athletics, who performed as London Boxing Club last year.

Al Reakes and Gord Mitchell combined to make 44 saves.

Regular season activity gets under way Saturday with the Merchants playing Chemainus Blues at Fuller Lake Arena and the Buckaroos visiting Lake Cowichan. Both games start at 8:30 p.m.

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In all competitive endeavors, there are occasions when one does everything perfectly, and yet emerges as a loser. Such was the case in today's deal, which arose in a team-of-four match. North and South could not have bid any better if they had seen each other's cards — but it gained them nothing.

♡ AJ862
◇ 753
♣ 52

WEST
♡ K1053
◇ Q986
♣ AKJ87

♠ KJ
♡ Q97
◇ AKJ1042
♣ Q3

SOUTH
♠ AQ1098743
♣ 10964

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ◇	4 ♠	5 ♠
6 ♡	Pass	6 ♠	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

South's four-spade bid was designed to make the road as rocky as possible ofr East-West. West, having the feeling that his side could fulfill a slam contract, now made the cue bid of five spades, showing first-round control of this suit.

North's six-heart bid may appear to be ridiculous to the inexperienced player, but it was actually a very fine bid. It stated: "Partner, I have the ace of hearts." If it had turned out that East decided to bid seven diamonds, a heart lead would have defeated the contract; the opening lead of the spade ace would have enabled East to fulfill the grand slam.

Against the doubled six-spade contract West opened the king of clubs, and at trick two shifted to a low diamond, which South ruffed. A second club was then led, East's queen winning. Another diamond lead was ruffed by South, after which a third club lead was trumped in dummy, East overruffing with his jack. And so declarer went down two tricks, for a loss of 300 points.

When the deal was replayed with North - South's teammates holding the East-West cards, East elected to open his hand with one notrump. South then pre-empted with three spades, over which West made the cue bid of four spades. East now chose to bid four notrump, to show his spade stopper — and that became the final contract.

Had South led a spade or a club, the four notrump contract would have been made with ease. But South led his singleton hert, North's ace winning. A spade return by North now enabled South to cash eight spade tricks, sending East down to a six-trick defeat.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Mike handed his friend part of the pack, keeping the rest for himself. "It's a complete deck, 52 cards in all," he declared. "If you drew one of my cards the odds against it being black would be 3 to 1."

"That's funny," replied Chairle. "If I gave you four of my blacks and you then drew one of my remaining cards the odds would be 3 to 1 against it being red."

How were the red cards and the blacks divided between them?

The Push Is On for the Crocus

This passing week has brought into flower the first of what I like to call "the new season's bulbs." These are the Fall Crocuses in blue, mauve and white, competing with the lovely pinky mauve of the much larger Colchicums.

Each day brings new Colchicum blooms into view, for every large bulb produces a lengthy succession perfectly suited to the fall season when a rain shower may flatten all which are at the moment fully open. Unlike Crocuses, Colchicums do not close their flowers under cloudy skies or at night as temperatures cool. This habit enables the Crocus season to last several weeks longer than the Colchicums. Even one species of Crocus once established will provide flowers for three to four weeks.

In July, gardeners were advised to plant these small Crocus corms as soon as they could get them. Now, I write about the flowers hoping to encourage others to hunt up a local source of supply for another year.

Only by creating a demand will a local grower feel it worthwhile bringing in a stock for propagation and sale. This has been done before and certainly is possible again if gardeners indicate their willingness to place orders and pick up the corms in late July for immediate planting.

Our first Crocus blooming this week is Crocus speciosus, a bright blue. When tightly closed in early morning, the flowers are slim points of navy blue; later, as temperatures rise in sunshine, they open almost flat, showing delicate veining of the petal-like segments, with bright orange anthers.

Hundreds of bees haunt the open flowers, pollinating from one to the other, so that this species will spread its planting by seeds as well as by bulb increase. There is a smaller-flowered pure white form named C. speciosus albus. Hybrids are sometimes available, C.s.Cassiope, a large late sharp blue, and C.s.Oxonian, a large violet blue with stems of the same color, a real beauty.

A smaller Crocus comes later in October and its color is quite distinct. Crocus medius has lilac-purple blossoms as opposed to blue and violet blue, and the brightest of orange-red anthers.

Still later, often around Christmas, Crocus imperati offers roundish goblets of rich lavender with purple veining.

Overlapping at the same season, C. laevigatus Fontenayi with softest blue-mauve flowers makes a treasured winter picture.

What if a cold spell or even a snowfall intervenes?

These hardy crocuses, most of them from high altitudes in southern Europe, simply await better conditions to make their appearance. If a hard frost comes first, no more flowers will appear until a mild spell is established.

If snow comes first, followed by sunny days, the crocuses at ground level will soon melt holes in the snow with the energy released by their growth. At the bottom of the opening you will peer, unbelievingly, at lovely fall Crocuses.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action au readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

TRIAL MONDAY

DUNCAN — The murder trial of James Rodriguez, 26, is scheduled to open Monday in Nanaimo at the fall assizes of the B.C. Supreme Court.

He is charged with two counts of non-capital murder in the shooting deaths of two Duncan residents, James Oldfield, 29, and Pamela Jones, 22.

Bodies of the victims were found last Nov. 15 near a municipal dump wrapped in sleeping bags and blankets.

Duncan lawyer Dave Williams will prosecute, and Victoria lawyer Michael Hutchison will defend Rodriguez.

VW Eyes Canada

WOLFSBURG, West Germany (CP) — Volkswagen eventually may build an automotive manufacturing plant in Canada, says Dr. Frederick Thomas, the company's management board member for finance and business.

Thomas told an Ontario government delegation that Volkswagen had considered building a plant at Halifax.

However, he said that after meetings with Ontario Premier William Davis and Claude Bennett, minister of industry and tourism, he had "seriously looked at the advantages of locating in Ontario, largely because of the manufacturing environment and support services."

Bargain-Hunting Europeans Flocking to U.K.

LONDON (AP) — The plunge in the value of British currency heralds a period of austerity for most Britons but is a boon for bargain-hunting tourists with money to spend on tweeds, silver and cashmere sweaters.

The steady decrease in the value of the pound sterling against the dollar and major West European currencies has made Britain one of the cheapest vacation spots in Europe. For the North American tourist, it means British goods—such as cars, shoes and clothing — are cheaper, and will continue to be so until prices go up, as everyone expects them to.

The pound's slide promises to make virtually everything more expensive for the British consumer—from home loans to toilet paper.

The pound—worth $5 in 1931, $4 in 1945, $2.80 in 1949 and $2.40 in March, 1975—fell below $1.65 this week. But then it was buoyed a liitle by the announcement Wednesday that Britain is seeking a $3.9-billion loan from the International Monetary Fund.

Politicians, businessmen and average Britons, meanwhile, were trying to assess the cost of a continuing decline of the currency, once the symbol of Britain's worldwide dominance.

But for a Canadian or American, it meant that the 100 pounds he bought for around $200 earlier this year now cost him only about $166. North Americans living in Britain and paid in dollars found the slide of the pound has meant an immediate rise in their living standards. But as with previous falls in the pound, these gains can soon be cancelled out by rising prices.

The Confederation of British Industry (CBI) estimated that every time the pound drops one per cent it brings a rise of one-quarter per cent in the retail price index. An inflation rate of 13 per cent is one cause of the pound's decline. Others include low productivity, trade deficits, government spending and unemployment.

"The slide in sterling is not welcome to industry," said a CBI spokesman. "British exports were already sufficiently competitive, and the devaluation over the last few days will increase import materials cost." This is because it now takes more pounds to buy goods from abroad and to buy raw materials from foreign countries for manufacturing. Britain is a trading nation that depends heavily on food and raw materials from abroad.

British Petroleum, Britain's biggest oil company, said the average cost of Middle Eastern crude oil had risen by about £1 ($6.85) a ton in the last two weeks because of sterling's slide.

Last year, Britain imported 85.8 million tons of oil—about 63.8 per cent of its consumption. And with the present monthly average running at about seven million tons, estimated The Times of London, the latest slump of the pound means that the oil import bill has been pushed up by about £28 million, or about $47.6 million, a month.

What works out to about £336 million ($571.2 million) added to Britain's annual fuel bill. The increases will inevitably be passed on to the consumer in higher prices.

A gallon of premium gasoline currently costs about 85 pence ($1.44) and a gallon of heating oil costs about 23 pence (39.1 cents).

Since Britain imports about half its food and pays for it with foreign currency, food prices are also bound to go up.

"We are very concerned about the latest crisis," said a spokesman for Tesco, a supermarket chain. "We haven't got over the effect of the drought. Not all food is bought through the dollar, but I'm afraid increases will be inevitable."

Reg Stanley of Safeway, another supermarket chain, said that a week ago a case of 48 7½-ounce cans of imported red salmon cost £35 (about $59.50) and now it costs nearly £38 ($64.60).

The full effect of the pound's decline on food prices, said the Wholesalers' Fruit and Vegetable Trades Federation, will not be felt until about Christmas, when Britain's home-produced food stocks run out and its dependence on imports begins.

With other imported goods the story is the same. Higher prices for imported iron ore will raise the cost of finished steel, and then of cars, washing machines and other manufactured goods using the metal. Higher prices for imported tin will add something to the cost of canned goods. More expensive timber from Canada and Scandinavia will increase the price of houses and of paper products from newsprint to toilet tissue.

The price of borrowing to buy a home is also expected to rise. There is speculation that the nation's building societies, or savings and loan associations, will raise their interest rates on mortgages to a record 11½ per cent to keep in step with corporate lending rates forced up by the government to make the pound more attractive.

About the only people deriving any comfort from the sliding pound are the thousands of tourists—most from Scandinavia and continental Europe — who are flooding into Britain in search of bargains.

"There's been a slight falloff in American visitors, and of those that do come, more are coming on the very cheap charters and staying in boarding houses to save money," commented Edmond Swinglehurst of Thomas Cook, Britain's largest travel agency.

"What is growing enormously is traffic from Europe. They're pouring into Britain to buy clothes and just about everything else."

Goods ranging from liquor to clothing can be bought in Britain for a quarter to a third of what they would cost in Sweden, for example. Swedish travelers say food is about half the price here.

The story is much the same from other European countries. The ferry boat ride or short flight across the English Channel or North Sea is cheap enough so money saved by buying in Britain makes it all worth while.

A Paris-London round trip by train and hovercraft costs aout $34, by train and overnight ferry about $48, and by plane about $70.

Gov't to Repair Carr Birthplace

Repairs to Emily Carr's birthplace at 207 Government will be carried out by the provincial public works department by next year at the latest.

Tom Broadland, chief of the historic sites advisory branch, said today repairs for deterioration and decay in the two-storey house built before 1871 could be considered routine maintenance.

An assessment of the work was carried out a few days ago and uncovered things like a broken window, unsound and missing plaster, sagging floor and shabby paint.

Broadland said the building, largely of redwood, is in generally sound condition.

"There is nothing seriously wrong with it," he said.

The house is being turned over to the department of recreation and travel industry but programs and activities taking place there likely will remain the responsibility of volunteers.

"The building should be used. We don't intend to put a glass cage around it," Broadland said.

Happy New Red Tape Year!

Unless it can find some way out of the problem, Victoria city council will find itself holding the inaugural meeting of 1977 on the official New Year's Day holiday.

The difficulty arises on two counts:

Because New Year's Day falls on a Saturday, which is a holiday for most public employees.

And because, in the interests of conformity, Victoria tries to arrange civic holidays to coincide with those for provincial civil servants.

The latter will have their day off in lieu of New Year's on Monday, Jan. 3, as that's the way such situations are spelled out in the collective agreement of the B.C. Government Employees Union.

Falling in line with the policy is no problem for most city hall employees, but a definite nuisance for a handful of senior officials plus the nine members of city council.

This is because the Municipal Act requires municipal councils to hold their inaugural meeting of the new year on the first Monday in January.

Council members pondered the dilemma somewhat ruefully this week. But they accepted Mayor Mike Young's suggestion to follow the province's example on the Jan. 3 holiday, and meanwhile inquire if the inaugural meeting can be held on some other evening.

There's no problem with the Christmas-weekend holiday clash. With Christmas Day and Boxing Day falling on a Saturday and Sunday this year, the provincial and civic holidays in lieu will be Monday, Dec. 27 and Tuesday, Dec. 28.

European Jobless Rate Rising

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — Unemployment in the European Common Market continues to rise, with women suffering most from the upward trend.

The seasonally-adjusted figures show rises in Denmark, Ireland, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Britain and Northern Ireland. Unemployment among women increased in all nine member states except France, where it fell.

The figures, collected from the nine member governments by the community's commission, show dramatic national falls of more than 40 per cent in short-time working which the commission said may be partly responsible for the slow response of unemployment to the recent slight recoveries of the economies of the nine.

Unemployment in the Common Market is nearly 1,500,000 up on the same period last year, the figures show.

Safeways Open Next Friday

Greater Victoria Safeway stores will re-open next Friday at 9 a.m. after being shut down by a labor dispute for more than a month.

Jack Fidler, Safeway district manager, said today some items might be in short supply, but produce and meat will be available.

There are seven Safeway stores in Victoria and one each in Sidney, Duncan and Ladysmith, employing a total of about 320.

The Victoria members of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union have voted to accept a tentative agreement with Macdonald's Consolidated, main supplier of Safeway stores in the province.

Union members in Vancouver voted Thursday night on the agreement but no results were available. Dawson Creek members were voting today.

Marilyn Chilvers, a spokesman for Safeway in Vancouver, said the company expects to hear the results of the voting in the three areas later today.

A meeting will be held Saturday to plan the orderly reopening of the company's 93 B.C. outlets, she said.

Orient Express' Last Run Marks End of Rail Splendor

BUDVA, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Orient Express, the legendary train long associated with beautiful women, spies and diplomats, will end its long Istanbul-to-Paris run to become a museum piece next summer.

The once-posh express began running in 1883, rose in splendor shortly after the turn of the century, then saw its fame slip after the Second World War.

This week, an international conference of 26 European railway companies decided to leave the train off the international 1977-78 schedule at the insistence of several cost-conscious West European members.

Passengers from Turkey to Paris now will have to change at Belgrade to a new express to Venice and from there take the regular Venice-to-Paris train.

Some found it ironic that the decision to scrap the express took place at this balmy Adriatic port, a tourist-oriented and fast-developing centre which has no railway station. The railway executives were forced to choose between planes, buses, automobiles and ships to get to the conference.

The latest and presumably the last effort to revive the splendor of the famous train was made last summer, when a number of international celebrities were persuaded to take the trip as a publicity stunt.

But the celebrities didn't experience the luxuries made famous in novels by Ian Fleming, Graham Greene and Agatha Christie—thick rugs and heavily-draped tables loaded with rich foods.

Their biggest moment came when they were welcomed during an early morning arrival in Belgrade by a blaring brass band of Serbs offering the local specialty, a high calorie cheese-and-egg pie.

By the time the train reached the Bosporous, a number of the jet-set passengers had abandoned their effort to act out the romances of the mystery books. They took the first available flights home, swearing allegiance to jet planes.

Javelin Hearing Oct. 25

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Securities Commission said a court hearing has been scheduled for Oct. 25 on its complaint that Canadian Javelin Ltd. has failed to file annual and interim financial statements.

A commission official said the Montreal-based mining company failed to file an annual report for 1975 and for the first six months of 1976.

Under the Quebec Securities Act, corporations must file annual reports within 170 days of the end of the period, and six-month reports within 60 days.

The earliest possible date for a share holders meeting is Nov. 6, a company spokesman said. Canadian Javelin cancelled a scheduled Sept. 30 shareholders meeting and said financial statements were not ready.

Two Premiers Late for Talks

TORONTO (CP) — The premiers' conference on constitutional reform began 45 minutes late and two premiers short today.

Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan's plane was diverted to Trenton, Ont., from fog-bound Toronto. He was to arrive at least one hour after discussion began.

Conference organizers said Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba was due to arrive this afternoon.

Both were represented by cabinet ministers as the chairman, Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, called the meeting to order.

Ontario's William Davis said the crucial matter facing the premiers is reaching agreement on an amending formula for the British North America Act, Canada's constitution.

Davis indicated his province was willing to compromise but not on the matter of unanimity.

"If someone comes up with a variation of the amending formula that does not require unanimity we would be willing to compromise," the Ontario premier said.

Premier Lougheed was just as adament that Alberta should have the veto rights.

He said Alberta's contribution to Canada was equal to that of any other province and Alberta was the strongest energy province by far.

This is the issue that left the premiers in disarray after two days of talks in Edmonton in Augut.

Prime Minister Trudeau has said the federal government will bring the constitution to Canada from England, where amendments must now be submitted to the British parliament, if the premiers fail to agree.

Despite the conflicting positions, some delegates felt that the situation might force the premiers to a compromise.

British Columbia Attorney-General Garde Gardom said: "If the amending formula is established the rest will go smoothly. We may even be able to agree on some substantive issues."

AIB Will End If Demands Cut —Trudeau

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Prime Minster Trudeau says he is willing to dump wage and price controls immediately if big business and powerful unions agree to tone down their demands for higher profits and wages.

"If we can get an undertaking that they will not ask for more than their fair share of the national pie, we'll take controls off tomorrow," Trudeau told about 500 Liberal Party supporters at a reception here Thursday. "We will stop controls because we will have succeeded in what we wanted to achieve."

He said the economically powerful forces of big business and organized labor would first have to agree not to ask for profit or pay increases exceeding the overall growth of the economy.

The real growth of the economy, after inflation is discounted, is expected to run between three and five per cent this year — substantially less than the eight-to-10 per cent wage settlement increases being allowed by the Anti-Inflation Board (AIB) under restraint guidelines.

Trudeau also promised Thursday the government will reassess the anti-inflation program by next March and discussions will be held with the provinces in an attempt to improve the working of wage-and-price controls.

Trudeau was commenting on a speech in which Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer said it was extremely unlikely his province would be in the program after March.

"I'm sure there will have to be all kinds of discussions if the program is to be renewed or prolonged," Trudeau told reporters.

TORONTO (CP) — Ken Maley, president of the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association, said in an interview Thursday it will cost Air Canada an estimated $100 million to meet a Quebec court order requiring the airline to permit pilots to use French in the cockpits of planes.

Maley said the $100-million figure was an estimate of the cost of translating flight and other Air Canada manuals, plus new equipment.

Hostage Freed, Cons Get Terms

Wayne Culbert, right, leaves jail after 80-hour ordeal

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—The ordeal of British Columbia pententiary guard Wayne Culbert ended at 4:30 a.m. today when prisoners released him to RCMP during a news conference inside the maximum-security prison.

It had been 81½ hours since the 21-year-old guard was grabbed by nine prisoners at 7 p.m. Monday, about two hours after prisoners in the east wing began a wrecking rampage to protest conditions.

Kitchen worker Walter Day, 50, also was taken hostage, but was released late Tuesday night after officials agreed to let members of a prisoner committee read a list of demands at a news conference.

Culbert spoke briefly to reporters before being taken to the prison hospital for examination and a reunion with his wife and family.

Ivan Horvat, president of the seven-man prisoner committee, said Culbert was not harmed and had not been threatened.

He said nine prisoners were involved in the hostage-taking. Three of them due for release soon were allowed to return to the prison's general population.

The six remaining prisoners turned themselves over to the RCMP and were taken to the nearby Burnaby RCMP lock-up where they will await transfer to another federal penitentiary.

Culbert's release and the transfer of the hostage-takers were two of at least 16 conditions laid down in an agreement reached in two long bargaining sessions between prison officials, the prisoner committee and members of the citizens' advisory committee.

Negotiating for the prison were Jim Murphy, Pacific regional director of the Canadian Penitentiary Service, and Ken Peterson, acting prison director in place of Dragan Cernetic who is on sick leave.

The final talks began at about 1:30 p.m. Thursday and continued non-stop until 1 a.m. today when negotiators signed the document.

The agreement, which was termed a victory by Horvat and other members of the prisoner committee, reflected the prisoner's distrust of guards who have demanded increased security at the prison.

The agreement said the RCMP are to remain at the prison for two weeks. After one week the RCMP will meet with prison officials, the prisoner committee and the citizens advisory committee to determine whether its presence is still needed.

In addition, RCMP are to be responsible for removing the 200 prisoners from the damaged east wing, a move to be monitored by both the prisoner and citizen committees.

Indians Plan Occupation

Cowichan band Indians will occupy the Nanaimo offices of the Indian affairs department if their demands to Ottawa aren't met, native rights leader Larry Seymour said today.

Indian affairs district manager Marcel Jutras was presented with a list of Cowichan demands Wednesday to be forwarded to Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand.

The occupation will take place if Allmand doesn't meet the demands, Seymour said.

And because the Cowichan Band office performs the same function as Indian Affairs offices in other areas, Seymour said "we will also occupy our own band office. It is just as ineffective."

"Just because they're brown bureaucrats, they're still bureaucrats as far as we're concerned."

Cowichan Band manager Louise Underwood said today she had not been approached by the group about an occupation.

She said Seymour is not a member of the Cowichan band but is from Chemainus, and had no other comment.

In Nanaimo, Jutras said if his offices were occupied, he will keep them open.

"I have a responsibility for 32 other bands on the Island, so the office will stay open.

On Wednesday, the group of about 21 Indians and three whites presented Jutras with a brief saying they are concerned with the deteriorating social conditions on the reserve — one of the largest in B.C. with 1,600 members — rising death and unemployment rates, and unsettled land claims.

They said they wanted a response from Allmand by today or the occupation would begin.

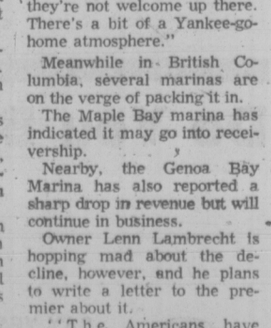

Jutras said this morning he had received no word from Allmand.

Seymour said the most important issue is immediate interim compensation for "stolen lands."

The Indians will use the money to build their own medical, dental and educational facilities on the reserve, he said.

He said the educational process off the reserve for Indians is a failure with a 95 per cent drop-out rate.

"We didn't want to be pushed into this position of occupation, but we will shut the offices down to get action on the demands."

Hospitals Squeezing Smokers Out the Door

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Bed patients at Royal Jubilee Hospital won't be allowed to smoke in future unless they have written authority from their doctor.

That was the toughest of several moves taken by both Jubilee and Victoria General Hospital boards Thursday night as they plotted, with some trepidation, to eventually squeeze smokers — be they patients, visitors, doctors or staff — right out the door.

The latest push originated with doctors using both hospitals who framed firm recommendations and passed them to hospital directors to endorse.

The doctors point out that hospitals exist to restore health and prevent disease and should be communify examples, that smokers at best aren't doing themselves any good, that their smoke often bothers those who don't and that the habit makes for a constant fire hazard in a hospital.

The anti-smoking campaign poses one obvious and some subtler problems, the obvious on being a powerful smoker backlash.

"I will continue to smoke my pipe," Dr. Weichmann Billung-Mayer, chief of the medical staff at Victoria General, said with a smile as he presented the motion to directors.

For the board to say to its 1,200 employees "you shall not" is not a good idea in 1976, said Mike O'Brien, director of employee relations. He suggested the best approach is through education.

Forcing smokers into exile will inevitably lead to some to sneaking smokes where they shouldn't, increasing the fire hazard, the board was told.

MYSTERY DISEASE BAFFLES DOCTORS

Manchester Guardian

JUBA, Sudan — The regional government of southern Sudan Thursday imposed a strict quarantine on the province of Eastern Equatoria to try to contain a mysterious disease that has caused many deaths in the area.

The epidemic is centred on the town of Meridi, some 250 miles west of Juba, where doctors say at least 40 people have died in the local hospital alone over the last three weeks.

A team of West German road builders based in Meridi was evacuated to Juba Wednesday night, and all roads leading through the province have been closed — including the main road to Wau, second largest town in southern Sudan after Juba.

Health ministry officials in Juba Thursday described the disease as a viral infection but said laboratory tests to check for yellow fever, typhoid and cholera had proved negative

A team of experts, including representatives of the World Health Organization, is planning to fly to Meridi Friday from Khartoum, Sudan's capital, for further investigation.

Symptoms include severe vomiting, diarrhea and fever.

Imported Wines Will Cost Less

Fanciers of fine wines received good news Thursday when the B.C. Liquor Branch announced price cuts on about 40 items — mostly imported wines.

Price reductions in provincial liquor stores range from 10 to 65 cents, Nick Clark, B.C. Liquor Adminstration Branch stocks director said, and added that the LAB had already been reducing prices on imported wines for the past few months.

Prices have been cut on about 60 per cent of them, he said.

Clark said the price cuts are possible through cost reductions to the LAB, partly through shipping changes and partly through fluctuating world currencies that worked to B.C.'s advantage.

Several examples of lower-priced wines follow:

—Sichel Claret has gone down 50 cents to $3.25.

—St. Emilion has dropped from $4.30 to $3.85.

—Undurraga, the Chilean red and white has fluctuated from $3.15 down to $2.55 recently, but climbed Thursday to $2.70.

—Beaujolais Supérieur drops from $5.15 to $4.95.

—Beaune goes from $8.85 to $8.20. (It was $9.95 a year ago.)

Some special stock will be offered on a one-time only basis sometime this month. They are wines picked up at the Christie's Bordeaux wine auction in London — 550 cases of reds and whites.

And on Nov. 1, a specialty section will open in the Yates Street store.

Fibreglass-eating bug found in West Coast waters

Mighty Mite Eats Glass Boats

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A marine organism named polyestermite is eating fibreglass boats, once believed impervious to attack.

The story of the mighty mite is told in this month's edition of the American boating magazine, Sail.

The organism was named polyestermite after it was first reported in Britain more than six years ago.

The shocker for North American fibreglass boat owners came recently when a Los Angeles man went to check his boat after a two-month absence.

From the dock he could dimly make out the outline of her deck under the water. When the boat was raised all that was left of the underwater portions were a few shreds of glass fibre.

Above the waterline, the boat's deck and cabin housing were also being consumed. Close inspection showed marine organisms, up to half an inch long, with much of their bodies buried in the disintegrating laminate.

Victoria marine surveyor Dick Meadows says local waters appear free of the polyestermite but he will confer with his Canadian, American and British counterparts when he attends the annual meeting of the National Association of Marine Surveyors in San Francisco next week.

Some boating people have speculated that lack of information on the polyestermite may be due to the desire of governments to protect the petroleum industry which supplies most of the polyester resin used for fibreglass.

The exact origins of the polyestermite remain classified but a reputable marine zoologist says the organism evolved from the gribble (Limnoria Lignorum), whose major food source was wood.

With the disappearance of many wooden hulled boats, the gribble has now evolved to the state where it can break down and digest polyester resin.

Sail magazine says the creature is believed to have three pairs of front legs which are used to tenaciously attach itself to any smooth surface, such as painted or unpainted gelcoat.

After doing this it undergoes a dormant period for about three days during which its color changes from a pale, almost translucent hue, to a dull brownish green. The color change is due to the buildup of a chemical, styrenic acid, within the body.

Marina Trade Floating South

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

While many British Columbia marinas are going broke, those on the American slide are having a banner year, according to a survey by the Times today.

Those on the Canadian side reported revenues this year at best barely equal to 1975 and at worst down 70 per cent from last year.

Meanwhile, the flow of Canadian money into U.S. marina tills has never been higher.

"Your Canadian inflation is beautiful as far as we are concerned," says Neil Tarte, owner of Roche Harbor Resort and Marina at San Juan Island.

"The Canadian money in our till is up 20 per cent from last year. It would have been higher if we hadn't had all that rain in the last two weeks in August."

All the American marinas had a great year because of the infusion of Canadian money, he said.

"For the first time they are buying gasoline down here because it is only 60 cents a gallon compared to about 75 cents up there. Despite our smaller gallon, Canadians are buying here for the first time.

"And food prices are lower, they tell us. Canadian inflation is bringing us a lot of business."

And it is keeping many Americans in home waters.

"They don't like Canadian prices and they get the feeling they're not welcome up there. There's a bit of a Yankee-go-home atmosphere."

Meanwhile in British Columbia, several marinas are on the verge of packing it in.

The Maple Bay marina has indicated it may go into receivership.

Nearby, the Genoa Bay Marina has also reported a sharp drop in revenue but will continue in business.

Owner Lenn Lambrecht is hopping mad about the decline, however, and he plans to write a letter to the premier about it.

"The Americans have stopped coming," Lambrecht said.

"The ferry rate increase is the main problem but there are many others. Americans complain about the (provincial) fishing licence and the

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Camosun College teacher Estelle Inman's home has a certain class.

About 20-strong in fact.

When a plugged sewer interrupted routines last Friday at the Quadra Street campus, the business teacher opened up her home at 1875 Carnarvon to her students.

She has been teaching bookkeeping and English in the living room, beginning accounting in the dining room and senior accounting in the rumpus room, or on the patio when it has been sunny.

"I've taught in all sorts of places, there's no real sweat here," she said Thursday.

Water was shut off in the building at 1250 Quadra Street because of a sewer blockage on View Street.

The city is working on the problem, but meanwhile, no water can be used.

Bookkeeping student Elizabeth Arny, 34, of 848 Monterey, said she didn't know what would have been done if Mrs. Inman hadn't held classes in her house.

"I think it's fantastic what she did. We wouldn't have been able to write our exams this week," she said. "We must be the luckiest class in Victoria."

Mrs. Inman said the students range in age from 18 to 60 and all are on fairly short programs so its important for them not miss classes.

"The neighbors were quite intrigued," she said, but once they learned what was happening, offered chairs and coffee.

Mrs. Inman said the enthusiasm and willingness to help in crowded conditions has proved to her that the students really want to learn.

"Even today we're not all that far from the little red school house," she said.

1,000 Voters Added In Neighborhood Drive

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

At least 1,000 names were authorized to be added today to the Victoria voter's list, and several hundred more could follow before the three-member Court of Revision has finished sitting.

No precise breakdown was available this morning for the court members — Mayor Mike Young, Ald. Bill Tindall and Ald. Ron McKenzie — but the bulk of the new names was apparently added through the efforts of Victoria neighborhood groups and associations during a month-long campaign to register voters.

Originally denied the right to take out bulk supplies of registration cards by city clerk Morran Waller, the groups took the matter to court and won a ruling in their favor.

Armed with piles of cards, they spent most of August on a sign-up drive which included establishing booths in shopping centres and door-to-door registration by volunteers.

When Waller entered the City Hall committee room this morning he was clutching two large stacks of cards which, he said, had been submitted so late that there had been insufficient time to process or count them all.

But about half of them had been verified as eligible voters, he said. The panel authorized these and a separate list of 360 qualified voters to be added to the rolls.

Unchecked cards, totalling between about 700 and 1,000, will be scrutinized and submitted to a later sitting of the court.

Waller said between 10 and 25 per cent of all cards submitted by outside agencies were not valid for registration. Among the reasons: wrong names, incorrect addresses, incomplete details, proxy signatures, no witness, residence in other municipalities.

McKenzie said this rejection rate seems proof enough that "these people (the neighborhood groups) are not capable of handling registration," and that "what the city clerk has been saying is in fact the case."

He wondered whether the city should appeal the B.C. Supreme Court ruling which allowed the free access by all and sundry to bulk supplies of cards.

Waller expressed concern that many of the stubs attached to the cards (a form of receipt indicating the person's name has been added to the list) have been detached by those conducting the registration, without any assurance that the person is an eligible voter.

This is one of the problems that arises when "some dingaling runs around town and signs 'em up," he added.

McKenzie said it was conceivable that some disgruntled resident who had been led to believe he was officially registered might launch proceedings to have the civic election declared null and void.

In Saanich there are 40,865 eligible voters, municipal clerk Gordon Hayward reported today.

This represents an increase of just over 1,400 for the 1975 count.

In 1975 there were only about 100 new voters added to the 1974 list.

Hayward attributes the large increase to the housing expansion in the municipality and also to efforts made to contact each resident.

"We sent reminder cards out with water bills," Hayward said, "We also contacted every apartment in Saanich with the co-operation of apartment managers."

TOWN TALK

The Red Cross recently launched a program in a number of city elementary schools to teach youngsters accident prevention and first aid.

To hep get the thing off the ground, a number of teachers attended a workshop cum orientation course to learn about the program.

The Tillicum elementary nominee — Mrs. Pauline St. Clair — dutifully attended.

At school next day, she stepped on a piece of apple peel dropped by a pupil and broke her ankle.

Congratulations, Colwood-Langford, on so rapidly shedding the last remnants of your stuffy, antiquated rural image and getting with it, 20th century-wise.

Let's see, you already have such fine unique amenities as the Colonel, A & W, and Smitty's. And now (will wonder never cease) you're about to get Dairy Queen and — the ultimate sign that you've joined the rest of North America — McDonald's.

All of them, of course, complete with their archietectural splendor and tasteful signposting. Rotating buckets, the whole bit.

So civilized, don't you think? And much more interesting to look at than those boring old fields, trees and open spaces which used to clutter up the place.

HOFFER
. . . at Jubilee

Dr. Abram Hoffer, the Saskatoon psychiatrist and biochemist famous for treatment of schizophrenia with massive doses of vitamins, has moved to Victoria after 27 years of practice on the Prairies.

Hoffer drew overflow crowds when he delivered public lectures on his controversial megavitamin therapy here in recent years, claiming an 80 per cent success ratio in treatment which some of his colleagues in the medical profession claim they have never been able to duplicate using his methods.

He is now on the medical staff at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Every now and then we're jolted with a reminder of the rabid racism that dominated official thinking even in Victoria's fairly recent history.

When city archivist Ainslie Helmcken was digging into his records this week, to provide some background information for a reporter writing about the announced closure of the Ogden Point grain elevator, he turned up the 1925 contract for the construction of the terminal.

In the agreement between the city of Victoria and Panama Pacific Grain Terminals Ltd., the company graciously undertook "not to employ Oriental labor."

Makes you suspect there wasn't a human rights commission around in those days . . .

It was cold and foggy tthe other night, and the hobo under the big Undersea Gardens billboard on the Pat Bay Highway may have thought he was under water he was so cold.

So he kindled a fire at the base of the sign to warm up a little while trying to hitch a ride into town to find a place to crash for the night.

A passing motorist, however, thought the sign was on fire and called Central Saanich volunteer fire department.

The volunteers responded, put out the fire and Central Saanich police drove the chilly hitch-hiker to the Town and Country shopping centre where he caught a bus to warmth and shelter.

One of the prosecution witnesses at CFB Esquimalt court martial proceedings asked to be excused early so he could return to his posting at Camp Shilo.

Cpl. James Simpson, a former mess manager at Club 44, the junior ranks mess whose affairs were investigated here, said he had to get back to Shilo because of an inquiry into the mess there.

"This follows you around, doesn't it?" commented judge advocate Lt.-Col. J. B. Fay, who is judge of the legal aspects of the trial.

At another point, civilian base supply inspector Daniel Barclay was describing his duties in determining whether items are decommissioned or returned to stock, which he called "sentencing."

Quipped Fay: "We're in the same business."

Vancouverite C. M. Parker writes it's not so much the hike in ferry fares that will stop him from visiting Victoria again as the cost of "tourist side shows."

He reports he and a friend spent a whole day vainly looking for a $1 show. Instead they faced the following entry charges: Butchart Gardens, $4; Classic Cars, $2; Wax Museum, $2.50; Undersea Gardens, $2.50; Fable Cottage, $2.50; and Sealand, $2.50.

"In desperation we actually paid our way in to the Undersea Gardens and sure enough it was worth only $1," Parker complains. "The final insult — 40 cents for half a can of Coke at the Sealand coffee shop."

MAN DIES IN FIRE

Fifty-five-year-old John Harmer died Thursday night after fire broke out in his suite in a three-storey rooming house at 2107 Dowler.

Victoria deputy fire chief Carl Coates said firemen responding to the 10:18 p.m. alarm quickly extinguished the blaze which was confined to Harmer's second-floor room and found Harmer lying on his bed.

Coates said the bedding had been consumed by flames and he presumed Harmer had fallen asleep while smoking.

Coates said considering the seriousness of the fire, structural damage was relatively light — about $2,000. He placed total damages at about $5,000.

The fire was spotted by John Gannon, 64, who occupies a room across the hallway from the victim.

Coates said Gannon was getting ready for bed when he smelled smoke, went into the corridor and discovered smoke oozing from under Harmer's door. Gannon banged on the door but was unable to rouse Harmer, and was forced by smoke and intense heat to flee the building.

Squeeze Threatens Patient Care

The provincial squeeze on operating funds has pushed Victoria General Hospital into the red — but directors were told Thursday night any more cost-cutting could jeopardize safe patient care.

Cliff Horwood, chairman of the board's finance committee, told directors the operating deficit is probably between $250,000 and $300,000 now and could climb to $350,000 by year end.

Last year Victoria General was the only major hospital in B.C. to operate without a deficit and this year's red ink comes despite a number of cost-shaving moves.

The board endorsed the finance committee's motion which read: "having thoroughly reviewed the current status of operating expenditures in the hospital, the finance committee is not prepared to recommend further cost-cutting activities without the board's full cognizance of the very real hazard that such measures may very well jeopardize safe patient care."

Two weeks ago a delegation from the B.C. Health Association, which represents hospitals throughout B.C., told Health Minister Bob McClelland that operating deficits among all hospitals this year will total $17 million to $18 million.

Royal Jubilee Hospital finished last year with a deficit of $1.3 million and has warned there will be another sizable deficit this year unless further provincial funding is made available.

Pizza Driver Robbed

Victoria police are searching for two suspects who held up a pizza parlor employee early today and robbed him of $229.

Police said Gary Johnson, 17, an employee of Romeo's Pizza, 1577 Hillside, was delivering an order to a house at 1034 Princess at 2:20 a.m. when he heard someone calling out to him over a fence in an adjacent lot.

When Johnson went to investigate, two masked men emerged, one brandishing a rifle.

They told Johnson to step over the fence, take off his shoes and hand over his money and the keys to the delivery van.

The men drove off in the van and Johnson called police.

The van was later found in the 900-block Queens.

Woman Charged With Aiding Escape

A 20-year-old woman was charged Thursday in Victoria provincial court with providing the boat used in the sea escape of three men from William Head prison Aug. 5.

Loti-Kathleen Baker, 20, 335 St. James, was charged with three counts of assisting the escape of William Ewanchuk, Derek John Poulsen and John Wesley Edwards. She was arrested late last week after a Kamloops hospital incident.

She told Judge Douglas Campbell she wanted to see her lawyer and the case was remanded to this morning for a bail hearing and possibly also choice of trial method and plea.

Kamloops RCMP announced the arrest of Ewanchuk one week ago today but denied reports that a woman was arrested at the some time. However, Colwood RCMP said Thursday both a man and a woman were arrested after they were taken to hospital in Kamloops for treatment of suspected overdoses of morphine.

A police spokesman said Ewanchuk had not yet been brought to Victoria to face an escaping charge because he was also arrested in Kamloops on one charge of possession of morphine for the purpose of trafficking and a second of a break-in and theft at a drugstore.

Ewanchuk, 24, was sentenced in 1973 in Calgary to six years for trafficking in a narcotic. Poulseh, 22, was sentenced in 1974 at Nanaimo to six years for trafficking in heroin. Edwards, 30, was sentenced last June 24 at Vancouver to a lengthy term for robbery and parole forfeiture.

Poulsen gave himself up in mid-August to Vancouver police amid reports a woman friend of his was to take similar action at that time. He was returned to Victoria, pleaded guilty to an escaping charge and was sentenced Aug. 20 to six extra months in jail.

Edwards remained at large Thursday.

On Aug. 5, a woman rented a small motorboat at Pedder Bay Marina shortly before a woman in a similar boat was seen taking aboard three men in a cove along the William Head shoreline.

The boat was later found abandoned in James Bay and police said its four occupants took a ferry to Tsawwassen from Swartz Bay. By the time Delta RCMP were notified and got to the Tsawwassen dock, the ferry's passengers had been gone about 10 minutes.

Cost Makes Low-Alcohol Beer a Fizzle

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Efforts to get British Columbians to drink more low-alcohol beer won't succeed unless the Liquor Administration Branch changes its pricing policies, brewery industry representatives contend.

Mike McInnis, director of marketing for Labatts, said in an interview the LAB will have to slash its price — and its profit margin — on low-alcohol beer if the product is to capture a larger share of the market.

Henry Binder, an administrator with Uncle Ben's brewery agreed.

They were asked to comment on a recent statement by Attorney-General Garde Gardom who thinks the availability of "light" beers might reduce the level of drunkenness in beer parlors — and help cut impaired driving.

Since introduced three years ago, the two low-alcohol brands (3.9%) offered in B.C., Cool Spring by Labatts, and Gentle Ben by Uncle Ben, have only accounted for about one quarter of one per cent of the total beer sales.

"In terms of the market share the low-alcohol products here have been a failure," Binder said.

But in the Prairie provinces low-alcohol beer sales run as high as four to five per cent of the market.

Why the difference?

It's the pricing formula, McInnis insists. He noted in Alberta a case of low-alcohol brew sells for 60 cents less than the regular brands; in Manitoba, it's 30 cents less.

In B.C., however, the savings is only 19 cents, or roughly one and a half cents a bottle.

And that's just not enough of an incentive to get beer drinkers to switch, McInnis said.

Binder said governments in other provinces are apparently trying to encourage people to drink lower alcohol beverages, "and doing it because they feel it's a responsible part of the government function."

B.C. beer drinkers, by and large, are finicky, McInnis said. They get comfortable drinking a particular brand and don't want to change. They're used to beer that's five per cent alcohol by volume. They don't want something weaker, like a 3.9 per cent low-alcohol brew, or even something stronger, like a fortified beer such as the now defunct Frontier by Molsons.

He said the introduction of any new line of beer is fraught with problems.

First there's the problem of matching supply with anticipated demand. That's critical because unless beer is consumed within three months, it generally has to be thrown out.

Then there's the problem of economies of scale. Because, proportionately so little low-alcohol beer is being produced, profitable economies are nearly impossible to achieve.

The result is that low-alcohol brew, from the companies' standpoint, is a money-loser.

Why do they continue producing it?

McInnis said it is partly a "sense of corporate responsibility to meet a demand no matter how small."

But he intimated there were other reasons. For instance, there's an expectation more breweries in Canada will follow the lead of those in the United States and start promoting lighter beers. And there's an expectation governments here will eventually try to encourage consumption of lower alcohol brews as a way to counter drunkenness. 'Finally there's an expectation beer drinkers' tastes can be changed even though the process may take time.

But as the manager of the Bastion Inn in Victoria indicated the barriers are formidable.

"We used to carry the low-alchol brand but there was no way we could move it. We had to practically give it away.

"Now we don't carry it any longer. We just don't get any call for it. The demand's not there."

TV Airs Human Birth Special

The Miracle Months, an unusual and dramatic one-hour informational special dealing with human conception, gestation and birth, using ultramodern photographic techniques, will be presented during the 1976-77 season on the CBS Television Network.

Recent breakthroughs in photographic techniques have made possible the visual presentation of biological events never before shown on television — a startling vision of the human body's "inner space" previously seen only by a limited number of medical specialists.

These techniques include cinemicrophy (motion pictures of living tissues taken through a microscope), fetoscopy (photography of the fetus in the womb), electron scanning microscopy (motion pictures taken through an electron microscope), thermography (photographic translation of body-tissue heat), time-lapse photography and fibroscopy (motion-picture "voyages" inside the body, filmed by means of sinuous tubes with lighted lenses).

The Miracle Months is currently being filmed on location in medical research and hospital centres in the United States, England, Italy and Germany.

Saturday Night Will Travel

NBC's Saturday Night, the late-night satire series that was the network's sole smash hit of last season, goes on the road in October for live telecasts from two college campuses — and possibly a historical site in Washington.

STARS ON ICE — Debuting this fall on Channel 8, this showcase series features regular performers, "the old smoothies" Irene and Harold Avery as well as an international cast of great guests and a chorus skating line of Canadian medalists with host Alex Trebek.

'She Was a Monster'

"She was a monster," recalls actor-singer Charles Aznavour, her close friend for more than a decade. "We say 'monster' in French when somebody is doing something to excess. She was singing like a monster. She was living like a monster. Eating, drinking, loving like a monster."

"She" was Edith Piaf, the extraordinary French songstress and the subject of I Regret Nothing, a documentary returning to Public TV 9, Saturday, October 2 at 9 p.m. during a special ten day showcase of new and treasured programs.

I Regret Nothing takes its title from one of Piaf's last songs — a song of resilience and pain against a rasping drumbeat ("My griefs, my pleasures—I don't need them anymore. My loves are swept away. I'm starting from scratch. No! I have no regrets.")

Piaf's childhood set the tone for her implausible tale of sorrow and triumph. Born on a sidewalk in a Paris slum, unwanted by her mother, she was entrusted to her maternal grandmother — the keeper of a brothel. Blinded by meningitis at age three, she recovered her sight four years later. As a sixteen year old factory worker, she was deserted by her soldier-lover before giving birth to a daughter. The girl died in infancy.

Piaf married twice: both husbands died in 1970 in separate car crashes. Her fervent two-year affair with French prizefighter Marcel Cerdan ended with his death in a 1049 plane crash. She herself survived three auto accidents in as many years, as well as a series of operations for various serious internal disorders.

In addition to newsreel footage of Ms. Piaf at home, on tour, with her lovers and husbands, I Regret Nothing offers some 20 "live" performances at Paris' Olympic Music Hall. Nondescript, even drab in her plain black dress, Piaf uses her hands and body with the controlled intensity of an actress.

The filmed performance of the title song was taken during her legendary engagement in 1960 following her return to France from the United States.

Breeders' Stakes On CTV

More than $40,000 for the winner's purse is up for grabs in The Breeders' Stakes, the final event in Canada's Triple Crown of thoroughbred horse racing, to be telecast, live, Saturday, October 2, 1:30 p.m. on the CTV Television Network, Channel 8.

Host Fergie Olver will be on hand with co-host, and well-known sportscaster, Jim Coleman. Together with Daryl Wells, who provides the exciting post-to-post 'call', horse-racing fans are guaranteed the best possible coverage.

With only two Triple Crown winners in the history of this unique Canadian competition, there is an inordinate amount of excitement building towards race day as Norcliffe, owned by Lt. Colonel Charles Baker, is in contention as the third winner of the Triple Crown, having defeated Military Bearing at The Queen's Plate, having captured The Prince Of Wales title at Fort Erie.

The overwhelming favorite for this final event, Norcliffe is facing stiff competition from such notable thoroughbreds as Tiny Tinker, owned by Warren Beasley, Military Bearing, now recovered from a minor injury, Laissez Passer, owned by J. Louis Levesque, Ambassador B. of Stafford Farms, Conn Smythe's Lucky Conn and Roger Leslie's Regal Quillo.

The longest and final event in the Triple Crown, The Breeders Stakes, is coming live from Woodbine on the one and one-sixth mile turf course.

This is the eighty-sixth running of the event which dates back to 1889 when 'Helen Leigh' earned $325 for the first place finish. Since its inception "The Breeders' Stakes" has been for three-year-olds foaled in Canada.

Every Night 'Is Special' On TV 9 Fall Schedule

"Every night is special at Channel 9 this fall," according to KCTS/9's director of programming and operations, Burnill Clark. "Not only have we put together a schedule based on programs that the viewers said they wanted to see, but we have organized these shows into theme nights, focusing attention on one or two major areas each evening."

Clark said Viewers' Choice held last February showed that the Channel 9 audience was most interested in drama, public affairs/documentaries and science programs. To reflect this interest in the schedule, Channel 9 purchased series not only from the Station Program Co-operative (of PBS), but also from independent producers.

Beginning Oct. 11, Mondays are dedicated to drama. In October, drama means Adams Chronicles at 8 p.m. and Hollywood Television Theatre at 10 p.m. In November, Visions, a series of the works of American playwrights, replaces Hollywood Television Theatre. Later, Anyone for Tennyson?, dramatic poetry readings, joins the lineup.

On Tuesdays it's a night for youths — which guarantees enjoyment for all. Specials, ranging from Piccadilly Circus to Puzzle Children, dominate the 8 p.m. timeslot, while the popular Monty Python's Flying Circus returns at 9:30 p.m.

The zany British troupe will be followed by documentaries. Later in the fall, local public affairs, Magtime, National Geographic specials and Hallmark Hall of Fame specials appear at 7:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. Starting in December, Jacques Cousteau's Oasis in Space, a search for lost kingdoms, comes into the schedule at 9 p.m. The late-night audience will be able to enjoy No Honestly!, a British situation comedy, at 11 p.m. beginning Nov. 23.

Arts and Sciences join together on Wednesdays. In October, this combination produces Nova (8 p.m.), Great Performances (9 p.m.), Book Beat (10:30 p.m.), and Anyone for Tennyson? (11 p.m.). In November these are joined by World War I, a fascinating look backwards, at 7:30 p.m.

Entertainment is the password on Thursday evenings, with programs ranging from the riveting Onedin Line at 8 p.m. to fine feature films at 9 p.m. Jeanne Wolf adds her perceptions at 10:30 p.m. (when film length allows), while Woman caps the evening at 11 p.m. No Honestly is provided for early-evening viewers in November at 7:30 p.m.

Public Affairs and Performance form an interesting combination on Friday nights. Viewers can get valuable information from Washington Week in Review (8 p.m.), Wall Street Week (8:30 p.m., Agronsky at Large (10 p.m.), Documentaries (10 p.m.) and Washington State People and Politics (11 p.m.). In November, Consumer Survival Kit at 7:30 p.m. and Specials and local public affairs at 11 p.m. add to the package. Public Affairs in the form of The MacNeil-Lehrer Report can be seen every weeknight at 7:30 p.m. in October and 7 p.m. after Nov. 1.

Friday night viewers also can watch such performance shows as Masterpiece Theatre (9 p.m.) and In Performance at Wolf Trap (10 p.m. beginning Nov. 5).

Saturday is a night for the whole family, with series such as Nova (6 p.m.), Rebop (7 p.m.), Once Upon a Classic (7:30 p.m.), Walsh's Animals (8 p.m.), The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes (8:30 p.m.), South by Northwest (9:30 p.m.), and Soundstage (10 p.m.). Walsh's Animals is superseded by Cousteau's Oasis in Space and South by Northwest by No Honestly in November.

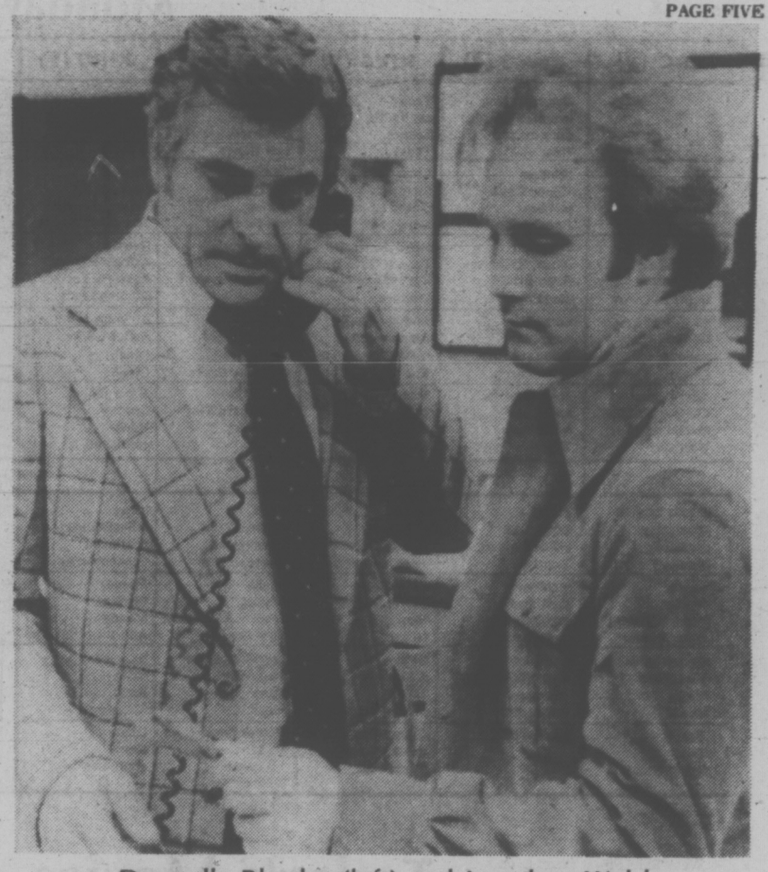

Public Affairs and Performance are featured again on Sunday evenings. Black Perspectives on the News (6 p.m.), World Press (6:30 p.m.), U.S.A.: People and Politics (7 p.m.), and Washington Week in Review (7:30 p.m. provide a rousing start while Evening at Symphony (8 p.m.), Masterpiece Theatre (9 p.m.), Great Performances (10 p.m.) provide an invigorating finish for the evening. After the elections, U.S.A.: People and Politics will be replaced by Agronsky at Large.

Gloria Kaye Rising Star

Gloria Kaye, who appeared this summer on CBC Television's Sunshine Hour, is scheduled as guest star on several CBC programs this fall.

HAL LINDEN host of the new ABC News children's series, Animals Animals Animals gets a hug and a kiss from an affectionate fan — a chimpanzee. Animals Animals Animals airs on Sundays at 11:30 a.m., on Channel 4, the ABC Television Network. The program explores the relationship of man and animal through such subjects as art, history, mythology, literature, music, humor and religion. Hal Linden is also the star of ABC's hit series, Barney Miller.

CBC's Sidestreet Returns

OTTAWA (CP) — Donnelly Rhodes sometimes forgets he is an actor.

Rhodes, one of two new stars in CBC-TV's Sidestreet, a police adventure series, said in an interview that he once automatically pulled out a police identity card when he was approached by a drunk in a Toronto bar. The card was a souvenir he received after filming a segment of Police Story in Los Angeles.

Sidestreet returns for a second season Oct. 3.

The series of seven hour-long programs was produced by Brian Walker and stars Rhodes as Sgt. Nick Raitt and Jonathan Welsh as his partner, Sgt. Glenn Olsen.

Guest stars include John Colicos, Kate Reid, Neil Munro, Deborah Turnbull and Murray Westgate.

The series has no violence for the sake of violence, CBC spokesmen say.

But Rhodes says: "I don't see how you can do a show about crime and violence without involving crime and violence."

In the premiere episode, Line of Duty, Rhodes takes a firm stand defending his partner who is suspended from the force after being accused of knocking down a pregnant woman during a demonstration outside a Toronto hospital.

Of the episode, Rhodes says: "It is not one of my favorites. Out of seven shows there are four good ones."

Sidestreet tries to emphasize realistic situations an believable characters, the CBC says. But one attempt at realism in Line of Duty appeared feeble. It shows Nick Raitt feeding a pigeon on the windowsill of his apartment. It was "to show that policemen have feelings," say Rhodes.

Rhodes appears believable as Sgt. Raitt. As for the Toronto bar incident, Rhodes says that when he explained that he was an actor and not a policeman, the bar staff congratulated him on his performance.

TRIPLE BILL ON 3

Camera Three presents an unusual triple bill of premieres in A Voice From Soviet Russia, featuring baritone Alan Titus and the CBS Chamber Orchestra, under the baton of Semyon Bychkov, in a performance of Alexander Lokshin's Symphony No. 5, Sunday, October 3 at 8 a.m. on the CBS Television Network, Channel 12.

Likshin (born in 1920) is an important contemporary Soviet composer, although his work is virtually unknown outside his native country. This broadcast marks the premiere, outside of the U.S.S.R., of his Symphony No. 5.

The broadcast also marks the American debut of conductor Bychkov, who emigrated from the Soviet Union last year. Bychkov (born in 1951) was the star pupil of Ilya Musin, head of the conducting department at the Leningrad Conservatory. He won the 1973 Rachmaninoff conducting competition and was the first student ever invited to conduct the prestigious Leningrad Philharmonic.

The program is introduced by musicologist and critic Faubion Bowers.

'San Francisco: The City That Waits to Die'

San Francisco: The City That Waits To Die, a BBC-produced documentary concerning San Francisco and the certainty of its earthquakes will be telecast Wednesday, October 6 at 10 p.m. on KING TV, Channel 5.

The 60-minute documentary is a look at San Francisco and the attempts to predict and even prevent earthquakes. The possibility of a rush hour earthquake is considered and resulting fatalities are extimated. Experts feel 50,000 to 100,000 lives could be lost (a number equal to the loss of American life in Vietnam) in San Francisco alone. When one considers the length of the San Andreas fault, a major fissure in California, some 200 miles long and separating North-South by an inch a year, the devastation that would result is mind-boggling.

There is black and white film of the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and the damage which resulted.

More startling still is the film taken from a boat of the earthquake in Anchoarage, Alaska, in 1964. There is additional footage of the massive clean-up following that disaster.

Program Examines Terror In North, South America

Terror, a program which examines the frustrations and despair that erupt in terrorist violence in North and South America, will be broadcast Monday, October 4 at 10 p.m. as part of Public TV 9's showcase of new and treasured programs. This second of a two-part look at urban terrorism explores methods used by the Tupamaros of Uruguay and the Quebec Liberation Front. Representatives from these organizations talk about their political ambitions and the motivation behind their tactics.

Reporter Jeanne La Chard interviews James Cross, the British diplomat kidnapped in Montreal in 1970, and Geoffrey Jackson, who was imprisoned in Uruguay for 8½ months. The special affords a rare look at Jackson in his prison cage, explaining the reasons for his capitivity, as well as an equally rare glimpse of the U.S. State Department's anti-terrorist room.

Channel 9 Election Alert Airs All Contested Races

Public TV 9's new season of Public Affairs begins this month when the award-winning Election Alert series returns to the air with intensive coverage of all contested state elections. The twenty-one hour-long programs, broadcast live weeknights at 6:30 p.m. between October 4 and November 1, feature leading reporters and representatives of the League of Women Voters questioning candidates on issues that will be considered in the upcoming session of the state legislature.

Channel 9 now is entering its second decade of candidate coverage, giving viewers a chance to hear where candidates stand on matters such as school funding, taxation, state welfare and super tankers. According to Producer Steve Welch, this year's series is particularly exciting because it "affords citizens a rare chance to hear the views of a majority of their state legislators."

Zoe Cladwell starring as Sarah Bernhardt

Zoe Caldwell to Portray Legendary French Actress

Front Row Centre, CBC-TV's monthly series of stunning 90-minute dramas, debuts on Wednesday, Oct. 6, at 9 p.m. with Sarah, a lush and loving portrait of the legendary French actress, Sarah Bernhardt.

Two-time Tony Award-winner Zoe Caldwell stars as Bernhardt, the magnificent woman whose theatrical greatness, furbulent life and tempestuous moods made her the toast of kings and shopkeepers, emperors and flower girls.

Bernhardt was born in Paris in 1844, the illegitimate daughter of a pretty courtesan (played by Olivette Thibault). The child was dangerously frail but early in her life developed a personal rallying cry that was to carry her through her private and public triumphs and disasters — Quand Meme — in spite of everything. In spite of her ill-health, in spite of the French theatrical establishment's horror of her off-stage adventures, in spite of the often vicious rumors that swirled about her, in spite of anti-Semitism, in spite of her disastrous marriage to Jacques Damala (played by Jean Leclerc) — in spite of everything, Sarah Bernhardt triumphed in a career that spanned three continents and six decades.

Written by Suzanne Grossman and directed by Waris Hussein (director of BBC-TV's award-winning series Notorious Woman), Sarah sweeps us through many of the glorious, outrageous and painful moments in The Divine One's Life.

Smallpox Elimination Documented on Nova

On the eve of the World Health Organization's announcement that smallpox has been eliminated, Public TV 9, will broadcast an encore presentation of NOVA's "Death of a Disease." Airing Wednesday, October 6 at 8:00 p.m. (rebroadcast Saturday, October 9 at 6:00 p.m.) this program documents the successful eradication project.

As late as 1967, smallpox killed an estimated two to three million people. Although there have not been any reported cases of smallpox in the United States since 1949 due to compulsory infant vaccination, many Third World countries have not fared so well.

By searching out potential victims — rather than with mass vaccinations — WHO was able to conquer the last case of smallpox in Bangladesh in 1975. By 1976, smallpox was confined to a few rural villages in Ethiopia. Once 10 weeks have passed without a reported case, WHO will be able to declare the world smallpox free.

Because of the difficult conditions prevalent in many developing nations, most people believe that smallpox eradication was an impossible feat. The story of how it happened has been called "one of the most exciting adventures of modern medicine."

Cooke, Prince Talk History

America's Last King, a filmed conversation between Britain's Prince Charles and historian-journalist Alistair Cooke, will be televised on Public TV 9 Monday, Oct. 4, at 9:10 p.m. (rebroadcast Saturday, Oct. 9, at 3:30 p.m.).

According to a London newspaper reviewer "the 27-year-old prince scores 9 out of 10 as an historian in discussing his royal ancestor King George III" and "he comes out on top as a TV personality."

Alistair Cooke's television personality is familiar to most television viewers: his background ranges from host of Omnibus and writer and Narrator of America to host of Masterpiece Theatre. Cooke had nothing but praise for the prince: "He was absolutely easy to work with during the filming. . . There was no impression that he's lived an insulated life or that his activities have been restricted to court circles."

America's Last King was filmed at the 900-year-old Windsor Castle, about 20 miles west of London. Because the castle was not officially open at the time, lunch was brought in from Buckingham Palace for Prince Charles, Cooke, producer-director Colin Clark and the film crew. In the absence of the regular retinue of servants, Prince Charles himself helped serve the guests.

Jackie Gleason In Two Films

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jackie Gleason is recharging his movie career, performing two films in a row. The Florida-based comedian recently completed a movie. He now joins Burt Reynolds and Sally Field in Universal-Rastar's "Smokey and the Bandit."

Leakey's Work Featured

Anthropologist Richard Leakey, who has proven that human beings lived over three million years ago, is the focus of a special airing Tuesday, October 5 at 8 p.m. on Public TV 9. The Three-Million-Year Clue chronicles Leakey's research and the discovery of an almost complete skull of Homo erectus.

Son of Dr. Mary Leakey and the late Dr. Louis B. Leakey, Richard is director of the National Museums of Kenya. In this John Heminway film he is seen at Koobi Fora at Lake Turkana in Northern Kenya. Also interviewed are various experts — such as artist Jay Matternes — who assess the discoveries for the audience. In May 1976 Leakey added an update to the film, describing his most recent discoveries. The Three-Million-Year Clue thus becomes one of the most current discussions available on the subject of the age of homo sapiens.

Electronic Music On TV 9

Synthesis, a remarkable half-hour concert of contemporary music performed on electronic synthesizers by Tom Piggott, airs Wednesday, October 6, at 10 p.m., on Public TV 9.

Piggott, a professional musician and educator, specializes in electronic music and has worked with The Carpenters, and rock stars Stevie Wonder and Tim Weisberg. Their influence is apparent in his choice of material, which includes an uptempo arrangement of Day by Day, a pedal steel version of the Carpenters' hit Top of the World, Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, a medley from Jesus Christ, Superstar and a symphonic presentation of Love Theme.

Performing on a console which incorporates six keyboards, a patch-cord jungle and a prodigious array of electronic controls, Piggott demonstrates the synthesizer's ability to simulate various instrumental sounds. He also offers a glimpse of the possibilities for creating melodic patterns from purely electronic sounds with an original composition, Arptasia.

Film Captures African Scene

Robin Lehman's second Academy Award-winning documentary, End of The Game, will be broadcast Tuesday, October 5 at 9:00 p.m. as part of Public TV 9's showcase of new and treasured programs.

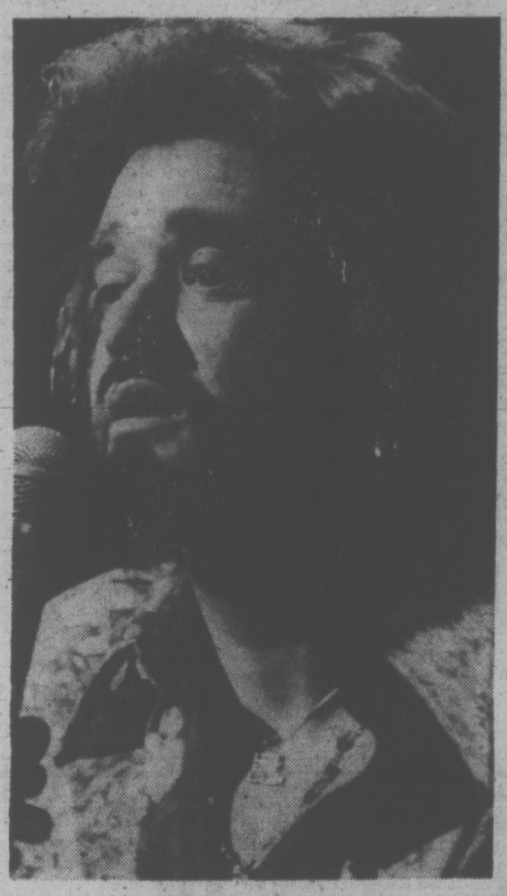

In End of the Game, imaginative photography captures the panorma of African wildlife, while the dramatic climax makes a poignant plea for conservation.

Program Features Women's Role In U.S. Revolution

The heroines of the Revolutionary War are forgotten women. Almost. In The Fight to Be Remembered, Friday, October 8 at 10 p.m. on Public TV 9 the stories of six little-known heroines are celebrated.

There was Winifred McCowan, a Revolutionary War camp retainer, who wanted to do something "just for herself," and stole the town bull. She rode it through the town, "causing the bull to be killed," and received one hundred lashes and three months in jail.

Judith Sargent Murray, whose manuscripts rotted in the attic after her death, was the first American woman to write on the equality of the sexes. Her plays were professionally produced in Boston, but — according to her nephew — nothing she wrote could compare with her cooking.

Molly Ludwig Hays, better known as Molly Pitcher, was pregnant when her husband was wounded manning his gun, and took his place.

Elizabeth Freeman was the first black woman to sue for and win her freedom in a Massachusetts court.

Deborah Sampson served as a private in the Fourth Massachusetts Regiment, disguised as a man. Later, after she was wounded in combat, she became the first woman lecturer in the United States.

Finally there was Molly Corbin, a woman who followed her husband to war. After he was killed, she became a "camp follower," trailing behind the regiment, and known as Dirty Kate.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Television puppeteer and author Shari Lewis has been honored with a star in the Walk of Fame.

Her star was placed in the sidewalk in front of a bookstore to recognize her authorship of 14 children's books, in addition to The Shari Lewis Show, a puppet program syndicated in the United States, Canada, Australia and England. She became the 1,678th entertainer honored with a star since the walk was opened in 1961.

Scene from The Onedin Line, to air Thursdays on TV 9

TV 9 Acquires Onedin Line

The Onedin Line, a dramatic series which combines the visual glamor of the seven seas and a realistic view of the harshness of Victorian life, has been acquired by Public TV 9 as part of its new fall season. The series airs Thursdays at 8 p.m. beginning October 7.

The story begins in 1860, in the rapidly growing part of Liverpool. The Liberals are in power, with the elderly, flamboyant Lord Palmerston as Prime Minister. The Chancellor of the Exchequer — Gladstone — has cheered the country with his budget abolishing income taxes. With her wealth and industrial skill, England is the envy of Europe. But many of her people live in a cold, undernourished world, without proper medicine, decent housing, or hope for the future.

In this raw, hard world, a few ruthlessly ambitious people make their way and their fortune, James Onedin (Peter Gilmore) is one of these men — a ship's captain with a heart of flint who is determined to own a fleet of ships. His wife Anne Webster (Anne Stallybrass) also is determined to go after what she believes are her best interests.

The couple must contend with the rivalry and antagonisms of brother Robert (Brian Rawlinson) and employer Callon (Edward Chapman). Also coming in for their share of use and abuse are sister Elizabeth (Jessica Benton), her husband Albert (Philip Bond), mate Baines (Howard Lang) and client Bragonza (Cyril Shaps).

Extensive filming at sea, and immense care with detail on land, have earned this series acclaim for its impressive pictorial quality. James Onedin's ship is a real one — not a prop. Film sequences were shot in spectacular locations ranging from the Azores and the Skagerrak t the English Channel, and involved the sailing ships of ten nations.

To re-create the Victorian port of Liverpool, the Old Docks at Exeter were refurbished completely. Street lamps were refitted by the Electricity Board, and the cooperation of local traders was sought to provide historic props. The canal was dredged, and three nineteenth century schooners were towed into position to be secured to the quayside. Later the unit moved to Dartmouth, and a similar operation of re-creating the 1860's was carried out in Bayard's Cove, Dartmouth Market and the Naval Quay.

CBC to Produce Music of Man

Plans to produce The Music of Man, "the most wide-ranging and ambitious television venture ever undertaken by CBC-TV's music department," have been announced by CBC-TV music chief John Barnes.

To be hosted by the distinguished violinist Yehudi Menuhin, the series of six hour-long programs will explore the history, role and impact of music on Western society. Produced in both English and French by CBC-TV-s music department in association with the Ontario Educational Communications Authority and the Mississippi Authority for Educational Communications Authority and the Mississippi Authority of Educational Television, the series will be designed not only for Canadian consumption but also for international foreign sales. Cost of the series is estimated to be in excess of $1-million.

Scripts for the series will be written by Chuck Weir and Curtis Davis, with Menuhin involved throughout. "The series will reflect a good many of Menuhin's thoughts about music," says Barnes, who initiated and will be coordinating the project. "We feel particularly grateful that Menhuin is so enthusiastic about doing this series during his sabbatical year away from concerts, and devoting a major portion of his time to The Music of Man."

The Music of Man will combine existing examples of music on film and original film material to be shot in numerous locations around the world. Research for film sources was conducted this spring in Germany, Italy, England, Sweden and France by a team of four directors — Dick Bocking, Neil Sutherland and John Thomson, all of CBC, and Curtis Davis, the New York-based former director of cultural programming for U.S. National Educational Television.

Filming of the series will start next summer and continue into the winter of 1978. The Music of Man is slated for telecast on the CBC-TV network in the spring of 1979.

Children Series On ABC

The ABC owned television stations are airing a new series of documentaries for children produced by Alan Sloan of Avatar, Inc., in association with the Encyclopedia Britannica Educational Corporation and 20th Century Fox.

The Encyclopedia Britannica educational film division has been producing films for classroom use for more than 30 years.

Scott Momaday to Script Images of Indians Pilot

N. Scott Momaday, a Kiowa Indian and Pulitzer Prize-winning author, has been chosen to write the pilot script for KCTS' Images of Indians series.

Using Hollywood films and documentaries from the past seventy years, Images of Indians will examine the changing stereotypes of Native Americans on the screen. The objective of the series is to draw attention to the impact these seven decades of films have had on the average person's conception of Indians, and on the Indians' own emotions.

Momaday's own work parallels the Images of Indians theme, as he reveals what it is like to be an Indian in today's world. Currently finishing a new novel to be published by Harper and Row this fall, Momaday won the Pulitzer Prize in 1969 for House Made of Dawn. He teaches English at Stanford University in Palo Alto, California.

Momaday is working with series' producers Robert Hagopian of KCTS/9 and Phil Lucas of United Indians of All Tribes Foundation, screening films which will be the basis of the pilot script and of the twelve other programs in the series.

JOURNALIST'S LIFE SUBJECT OF FILM

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The life of Arizona reporter Don Bolles, killed by a bomb detonated in his car, will be the subject of a motion picture special for television.

Harris L. Katleman, president of MGM television, said he is negotiating to make the film with Arthur Loew, Jr., who has obtained film rights from the reporter's widow, Rosalie.

Bolles, 47, was to have met an informant who was allegedly going to release information linking top Arizona politicians to a land fraud scheme.

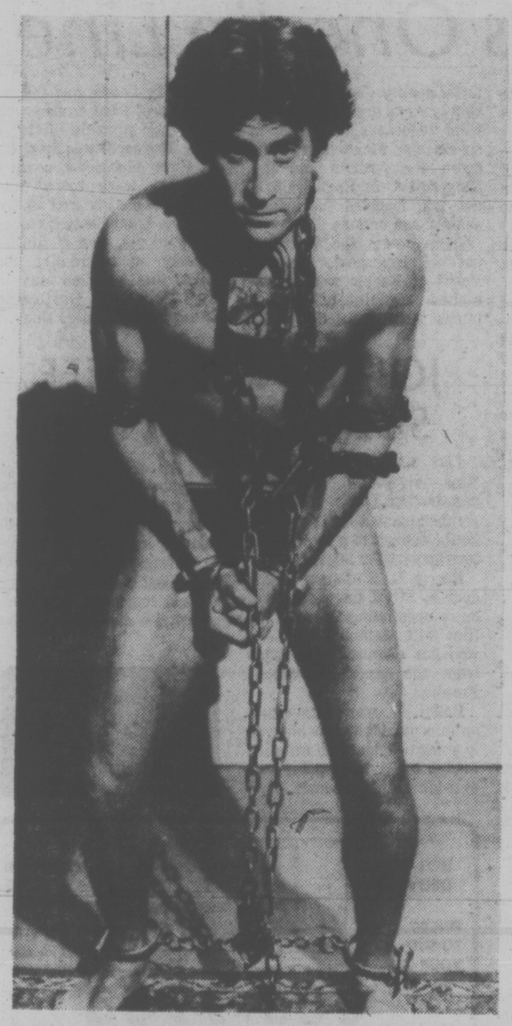

As the reporter left the Clarendon Hotel in Phoenix, Ariz., a remote-control device detonated three sticks of dynamite implanted under his car. His right leg was blown off in the blast and his right arm and left leg were later amputated. He died several days later.

Books

Heart of a Stranger, Margaret Laurence's collection of 18 articles written for newspapers and magazines between 1964 and 1976, is one of the books I've been waiting for. (Others include a full-length love story by Alice Munro, a children's book by Max Ferguson, and Mrs. Hugh Garner's memoirs. I have no idea, of course, whether any of these will ever be written.)

Heart of a Stranger is as essential to Margaret Laurence students and fans as any of her novels. It tells us some of the things we've always wanted to know without divulging so much that we wish we'd stuck with the novels instead. And it provides that extra bit of background and insight which can do so much to enrich the novel-reading experience.

I'm aware of the purist argument that fiction should be read and appreciated as it stands, without reference to its author's personality or life. But as with most purist arguments, this one stands up better in some cases than it does in others. When a writer's strongest appeal is to the brain, the nervous system or the funny bone, it makes little or no difference if one knows where he was born and what he thinks about Dr. Spock, say, or nuclear power stations. But when a writer's strongest appeal is to the human heart — ah, that is another matter entirely.

To me, the most important single quality about Margaret Laurence as a writer — and very likely as a person, to judge from her new book — is that she is so richly endowed with "heart". Translated into slightly more specific terms, "heart" means warmth, understanding, compassion, and an empathy with others that is light years removed from mere tolerance of them. When a writer has both "heart" and a strong head to keep him out of the swamps of sentimentality, he's got nearly everything.

In a Foreword to her latest book, Laurence explains her view of the purpose of fiction: ". . . for a writer of fiction, part of the heart remains that of a stranger, for what we are trying to do is to understand those others who are our fictional characters, somehow to gain entrance to their minds and feelings, to respect them for themselves as human individuals, and to portray them as truly as we can." It's a statement of purpose with which many writers will obviously not fully agree, but it's a valid statement for all that, as the career of Margaret Laurence has proven again and again.

Heart of a Stranger opens with an intriguing account, written in 1970 (and before Atwood's Survival), of how Laurence came to choose what was for her the "inevitable theme" of survival. Next follow half a dozen pieces describing travels in Greece and Egypt and encounters with Ghanaian and Somali people and their cultures. Her long article titled The Poem and the Spear, the tragic story of Mahammed 'Abdille Hasan ("Mad Mullah" to the British, "whose deeply ingrained imperialism did not permit them to see him as a nationalist leader with a legitimate aim,") has never been published before and is possibly the best and most enduring piece in the book.

Laurence's years in Africa and a later pilgrimage to the Scottish Highlands have combined to create in her a unique perception of the early history of Western Canada. It's fascinating for a reader of Laurence's fiction to trace the evolution of her major themes in these short articles written for publications as diverse as Holiday and the Vancouver Sun. They reveal a writer and a woman whose loyalties transcend national boundaries, who celebrates Christmas for the sense it brings of "god's grace, and the sense of our own family and extended family, the sense of human community."

Heart of a Stranger also contains short pieces on such subjects as taxis, air travel and television interviews. Here Laurence does her best, but the light touch is not really her forte. Read this book for the insights it brings to her works of fiction, and for its plain statements of such cries from the heart as this: "We have largely forgotten how to live with, protect and pay homage to our earth . . . time is getting short."

Or this, written in 1971, with its so very ironic message for today: "Many (small towns) turn out to be to our culture what the possession of manuscripts in monasteries was to mediaeval Europe during the dark ages? . . . They may not be our past so much as our future, if we have one."

May They Never Run Dry

By REG TERRY

In the recent heat wave over Britain, when all Wimbledon wilted and eggs sizzled on the paving stones of Piccadilly, when under the great dome of the British Museum Reading Room earnest scholars loosened their woolly mufflers or dozed over the card index, when the Serpentine was slowly turning into a muddy puddle and the underground system boiled and grumbled like an ancient hot-water tank, when weather forecasters commanded larger audiences than Telly Savalas or Princess Anne, and ice cream men seemed all set for peerages in the next honors list or OBE's at the very least, a tragedy of unimaginable horror loomed before the nation.

Not the overheated economy, not the falling pound, could have brought a greater frown to the national countenance than that awful prospect trumpeted by the evening papers one dreadful night: the pubs were running dry.

Thoughts on that unique British phenomenon, the "local," the mystique of unchilled English bitter, so puzzling to the visitor from abroad, the merits of different brews and the whole lexicon of pub customs, had a timely focus for me when I read Michael Jackson's The English Pub, a first-rate draught of a book by a man who really knows his pig's ear (Cockney slang for "beer") and whom I shall certainly treat to a tumble-down-the-sink ("drink") next time he's in town.

Jackson wisely avoids the encyclopedic (Mark Girouard's masterly Victorian Pubs), the folksy-quaint (Denzil Batchelor's The English Inn), the esoteric (Eric Delderfield's Introduction to Inn Signs), and the localized (City of London Pubs by Timothy Richards and James Curl), but has enough of each in 160 pages splendidly illustrated for a useful addition to this growing and entirely laudable field of study. Avoiding the traps of either patronizing or boozy conviviality, he gives a plain account of pub history, society and pastimes, some details of pub signs and architecture, short summaries of what makes English beer the best in the world and a few tips on where to find it.

For me one of the more interesting bits is the account of the amazing beer revolution of the 1970s, a classic in the Dunkirk tradition, told with a true fervor of a believer in good taste and fair play for the underdog. The enemy in this case are the monopoly brewers and their P.R. slavies, who in the name of modernization (i.e. higher profits) tried to change drinking habits and pub design in the 60s. It was bad enough that countless locals were tarted up with leatherette and plastic, but then the enemy turned their unwelcome attentions to the beer, replacing touchy, yeasty, still-working brews with clear, pressurized and pasteurized pints, and oceans of that unpalatable fraud, the chilled and anemic English lager. Alas, lager and its floozie — lime, still sell an unspeakable two billion pints per year in the U.K., and there are too many landlords wooing the young with thundering jukeboxes and one-armed bandits where once there was conversation, sing-song, dartboard and skittles in the bar.

However, there are changes. A favorite pub of mine. The Lamb, in Lamb's Conduit Street, W.1, once Dickens' local, took down its snob screens some years ago as part of a modernization scheme. Snob screens are small engraved glass partitions at head height, which you can swivel to address the barman — or better still, barmaid — without being overheard by your neighbor. As Jackson delightedly recalls: "The customers protested with all the invective that might be expected from literary Bloomsbury, and the pub's owners (Young's Brewery) put the screens back."

So the battle to put beer back on its feet, so to speak, has been waged with true British spirit, and waged, I may say, with results even more striking than when Jackson researched his book. Today even in London's West End small private breweries are offering "Real Ale" and the conglomerates have been quick to follow suit. It is perhaps a small black mark to Jackson that he does not acknowledge one of the field marshals of this campaign, Richard Boston, who has fought the good fight in The Guardian columns for years.

Still, a small blot on a jolly, refreshing book. The fact remains that a battle is being won: a glorious struggle in which the consumer has fought back. Graffiti in London's underground no longer despairingly urge "Beer Drinkers of the World unite." Beer-pulls are coming back and the beer is getting better. Take heart from this statistic: for all the regional monopolies there are more than 70 local breweries in action — 1,000 different brews to choose from. Sterling may totter and inflation gallop, it is well to be reminded of the verities. Jackson tells us one of Sydney Smith's notable observations: "What two ideas are more inseparable than beer and Britannia?"

Giants of Battlefield

However much we may deplore the fact, there exists an increasing vicarious interest in grand warfare, judging by the never-ending flow of books on the subject. I have received the barest fraction of the total output and have only retained a careful selection for reference purposes, but already I have four lengthy shelves crammed with them.

Interest in war is largely displayed by men, because it is atavistic. Jan van Lawick-Goodall has discovered that male chimpanzees use rocks and branches as weapons, thereby supporting the theories of ethologists that when our earliest ancestors left the trees to live on the dangerous African savannah they survived solely by their ingenuity in devising an arsenal of crude arms.

In an increasingly sophisticated way we've been at the same game ever since.

It's fashionable to accuse modern man of aggression for aggression's sake, but even discounting the instinctive urge it should be remembered that modern warrior chiefs (most of them cultured, gentle souls) have been fascinated by strategy and tactics and that killing per se has been incidental to the main intent, the outwitting of one's opponent.

It follows then that the intense interest in books about warfare is due not to concern with gory details but to gain a greater appreciation of generalship. For this reason The War Lords: Military Commanders of the Twentieth Century, should find a ready market, despite its exhorbitant cost.

When Field Marshal Sir Michael Carver undertook to edit a book of military biographies he had in mind "a short list" of 100 personalities. This was clearly impossible for a single volume so the list was reluctantly reduced to 43 men, all of whom played a key role in the field in either the first or second of the world wars.

In making his final selection Carver's principal criterion was that a man should have exercised command of a considerable force — land, sea or air — in an important campaign; a secondary one was to cover as many different campaigns as possible.

To save space 'war lords' who directed policy at the highest level have been excluded, as have the Russo-Japanese and Sino-Japanese wars, and the guerrilla and anti-terrorist campaigns of the second half of the century.

These criteria have therefore excluded such men as Lawrence, Wingate, Tito, Mao Tse-tung, as well as Alanbrooke, Portal, Pound, Marshall, King, Arnold and Chiang Kai-shek.

So we have from the First World War five Britons, three Frenchmen, three Germans, one Turk, one American, and one Australian. From the Second World War space has been divided between 10 Britons, nine Americans, five Germans, two Russians, one Japanese, and one Frenchman.

Because the careers of Second World War commanders are so familiar to us most readers of this book will, I think, find the exploits of 1914-18 commanders of greatest interest. And my first criticism is that not nearly enough space has been devoted to these men — a mere 187 pages out of a total of 600.

With space at a premium I question the inclusion of Field-Marhal Erich von Falkenhayn, a cold, secretive, waffling incompetent whose sole claim to fame is his responsibility for the battle of Verdun, which lasted 10 months and cost France some 275,000 men and the Germans nearly a quarter of a million.

However, to balance the criticism of the inclusion of von Falkenhayn I must congratulate Carver for including General Sir John Monash and General Mustafa Kemal (Ataturk).

Kemal, better known today as a statesman and diplomat and the father of modern Turkey, was without doubt the greatest field commander of this century. Lord Kinross has written a splendid piece about this great man and, with one exception, it is the only piece that whets the appetite for more.

The exception is Malcolm Falkus' evaluation of Australia's General Sir John Monash, who was by common consent the finest general in any army on the western front. Monash, a learned man (he held degrees in arts, law and engineering), was favored by Lloyd George as commander-in-chief because of his flexible approach to tactics, his thoroughness, and his boldness and brilliance. Because of his novel approach to battle plans Monash was the only First World War general who would have been equally at home in the Second.

Others included in this section are Jellicoe, Joffre, Haig, Hindenburg, Petain, Ludendorff, the tragic Ian Hamilton, Foch, Allenby, Pershing, and Trenchard.

With the exception of France's Marshal Alphonse Juin and U.S. Admiral Raymond A. Spruance, all those included in the Second World War section are household names and do not require to be listed here. Eisenhower is afforded the most space with a boring 30 pages, as compared to a scant nine for Rommel.

Apart from its handiness as a concise reference work no serious student of military history need bother with this book. Potted biographies are never satisfying and anyway these are mostly condensed versions by authors of full-scale biographies, authors such as Gavin Lyall, Corelli Barnett, John Strawson, Nigel Nicolson, and Ronald Lewin.

For the general public — at least those who can stomach the price — The War Lords could prove a useful introduction to a wealth of good reading.

Incidentally, if it is your intention to study the great commanders of this century in depth I would strongly urge you to commence by reading Reputations, by the greatest writer on military affairs of all time, Capt. Sir Basil Liddell Hart, who, it goes without saying, is quoted by every single contributor to The War Lords.

Toronto the Bore

By JACK SCOTT

Eric Nicol, the noted columnist who has written many true word in jest, is briefly quoted in this collection (but, then what reference to the city is not?) and it may just be the last and best word on the subject.

"It is breath wasted," Eric wrote, "to argue articles of faith (religion, politics, economics, golf) or matters of taste (wine, women, theatre, Toronto)."

Certainly it is very true of William Kilbourn's collection of Torontonia. For those who have some crazy attachment to a town that, like this anthology, contains a lot less than meets the eye, it may be of some small interest. For those who greet the very name "Toronto" with an involuntary yawn (including that half of the city's population born elsewhere in Canada, there only to make a buck or without choice in a promotion to head office) it has to be a total bore.

Someone has said, "No one should visit Toronto for the first time" and that goes for this book as well.

What has been done here by Kilbourn, himself Toronto-born, a university professor and an indefatigable editor of other people's writing, is to dump together every literary reference to the unlovely Ontario metropolis and pass it off as the definitive reference to the place.

The result is not only an exercise in tedium, but a bit of a fraud, as well. The dust-jacket, for example, promises the reader "pieces" on Toronto by Charles Dickens, Buckminster Fuller, Stephen Leacock, Ernest Hemingway, Andrew Allan, Harold Town, Anthony Trollope, Rupert Brooke, Edmund Wilson, Marshall McLuhan, Brendan Behan and a great many more.

Goodie, goodie, the innocent reader is apt to exclaim, until the truth comes out on the inside.

Dickens? A brief mention in his "American Notes" in which he observes, in 1842, "The town itself is full of life and motion, bustle, business and improvement." Hardly David Copperfield.

Buckminster Fuller? Four lines referring obscurely to Toronto as a possibly "future-oriented, prototypic city." Leacock? Five lines, including, "The typical Torontonian is about five feet, nine inches, high, with fairly broad shoulders and a dolicholcephalic head with an ear on each side of it." Prophetic? Funny? Moderately, to say the least.

Hemingway? Two undistinguished features from the Toronto Star that might well have been written by any junior reporter and bear little or no resemblance to Hemingway, the novelist.

But why go on? And, in fact, very few non-Torontonian readers will go on when confronted with this kind of ennui-producing stuff.

Those pieces which are non substantial, particularly well done in the case of the boyhood reminiscences of Robert Thomas Allen and Peter Gzowski, are worth reading in any context, but no amount of good writing by Pierre Berton can get the outsider really interested in Union Station. Kilbourn, himself, is something less than compulsive reading in his sketches on Toronto's first mayor, William Lyon Mackenzie. Parochialism, indeed, crushes some otherwise readable observers.

The outsider even may be inclined to think that Allan Fotheringham, another Vancouver columnist, may have described Toronto most accurately, for the visitor, when he observed, "The problem with poor Toronto is that the city is without any interesting typographical features. A city, to have character, must have some inclines, some vistas. Spend all day in Toronto and all you can see is the city. You cannot lift thine eyes up unto anything but man-made mediocrity. There are no hills to look down from, or up to. The soothing sight of water, of Lake Ontario, is virtually prisoned off from the city. It's a debilitating experience just to be an inhabitant. Inmate may be the more appropirate word."

In a nutshell it really comes down to this: "The Toronto Book" is for Toronto, if it is that. It ain't for the rest of us.

Poetry Without Answers

MARILYN BOWERING

When a poet deals with the large questions of the nature of being and the individual's place in it all, the temptation is to feel that one must be in a special, somehow holier-than-usual frame of mind in order to receive the poet's wisdom. For those of us who find a hint of the mystical intriguing, the temptation to rarify and sanctify usually kitchen-cluttered inner space is well nigh irresistible.

I must admit that I took Miriam Waddington's The Price of Gold with me out into the ocean and to the top of a mountain before deciding that I had better let the poet catch me at home, in everyday disarray. Illumination and wisdom cannot be run after and, in any case, the quiet of the contemplative's retreat is not the place to, or from which, Waddington speaks.

In The Price of Gold, Waddington is attempting to heal the separation of large philosophical questions and the facts of quotidian life. She writes about everything from tourists to the dead, using a framework (certainly not a new one) of the multiplicity of being and its source in Oneness. The careful crafting of the poems can be taken for granted. The simplicity and directness of the short lines and spare syntax and, often, the use of rhyme, make for an atmosphere of strength and humility which keeps her from sounding pretentious — as poets have sometimes been known to sound when being outright philosophical.

Waddington is not unaware that multiplicity can add up to nothing — "we are not one but two . . . we are not four but many — sometimes we are not any" — nor that there is a dark side to being when opposites are united and endings revert to origins:

Love . . . will you raise me a tower and make your heart
my flower? . . .
sorrow itself
will raise you a tower, and death, death, will be your flower.

This eerie and ambiguous nature of existence is best presented in the final poem of the book where Waddington visits the cave of contraries and sees summoned up "the shadowy figures/of those who come after/and their shadowy/laughter. Why or what their laughter is must give us pause.

Waddington is not always so intense or chilling. She also deals with love and death in a personal and earth-bound way that may be more comfortable for some readers. When talking of love, she tends to sound like Sappho, a poet who has always seemed to me to be singularly unneurotic about passion. "Do you ever feel/your mortality or do/all your lovers/die from your kisses?", Waddington asks Her advice to the victims of such passions is also sound — "When you stop/looking in mirrors/ . . . your heart/will surely heal" — an admonition to remember that life is more than oneself.

An important part of the outer world is political and social in its nature. In a section titled Living Canadian, Waddington uses many cultures, geographies and peoples to try and define a social-political oneness that is Canada. It seems, however, that this unity is the substance of things hoped for. The listing of the multiple contents of our nation may bring us closer to no-thing than to One. That is the problem with an approach using opposites and contraries; which is definitely a problem for someone looking to Waddington for specific answers.

But that is not really the function of poetry and Waddington's system, for which she has laid the groundwork as carefully as any mathematician, is consistent within itself. It suggests new beginnings rather than conclusions and that will have to be answer enough.

Out of the Clamor, a Strong, Clear Voice

By JULIAN REID

In 1966, Andrey Sinyavasky was convicted of the most heinous of all crimes against the Soviet state—imagination. Over the previous five years, safely masked by his pseudonym "Abram Tertz," he had proved himself a master of satirical fantasy, his private vision profoundly at odds with the officially sanctioned tenets of "socialist realism." And so he was found guilty of "manufacturing" subversive literature, and duly shipped to Dubrovlag, a "corrective labor colony" some 300 miles distant from his native Moscow.

It was as if he had been transported to another world. "Everything here is a little fantastic—both faces and things. The air is thick with expectations (of the end of one's sentence, of the end of life, or of the world) and this lends an unusually frenetic quality to the slightest things." But soon he realized that this air of frenzy was largely illusory, the product of perceptions as yet unacclimated to a new order of reality. "Earth's time no more applies here than it does on Mars . . . psychologically, life in a labor camp is like travelling in a long-distance train: the automatic forward movement of time creates the illusion that an otherwise empty existence is being filled and made meaningful."

Twice each month for the six years he spent in Dubrovlag, Sinyavsky was permitted to write a heavily-censored letter home to his wife, Maria. After his release, he assembled excerpts from these letters into A Voice From the Chorus, a remarkable testament that is less a prison journal than a searching "inner monologue"—much like the earlier volume, Unguarded Thoughts, in which he recorded the spiritual upheavals attendant upon his conversion to Christianity.

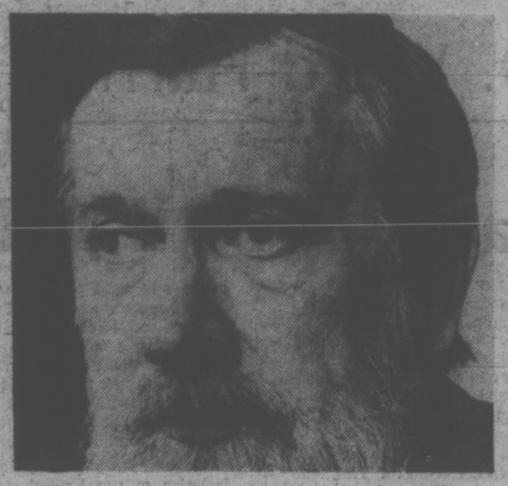

In Dubrovlag, the Bible was strictly forbidden. But concealed in one of his boots Sinyavasky kept a hand-copied text of that most profoundly subversive of all its books, the Revelation to John. Along with the habit of faith, it was enough to sustain him.

"Once you are over the dividing line," he wrote, "plunged into a situation in which, however hopeless it may be, there is no turning back, then the wholeness of an existence that neither threatens further loss or holds out hope of gain envelops you in a feeling of serene and trusting calm."

With an acutely sympathetic eye, he observed his fellow-prisoners. "What capacity for thought and ability to plumb its ultimate depths they have, these creatures plucked out of life and put behind bars. The transcendental invades their minds and personality inevitably retreats into the background. Indeed these are no longer people but open expanses. Not characters, but spaces, fields. Once he is in contact with the infinite, a man's natural limits are affected."

Common criminals mostly, these fellow-prisoners comprise the ever-present "chorus" of the book's title. Throughout, Sinyavsky's reflections are punctuated by isolated fragments of their chatter. Some are unabashedly crude ("When they start playing a symphony I want to throw up"), some unintentionally comic ("My organism is atrophied"), some taut with animal longing ("Our cashier girl has pink knickers—I saw them in a dream!"). Many are starkly poetic: "I woke up one morning and heard the cosmos shrieking!" . . . "When I first heard of death I didn't want to live." . . . "God has given us time—to collect our thoughts." . . . "The good thing about this place is that a man feels he is nothing but a naked soul." . . .

SINYAVASKY . . . Testament from prison

Out of this eloquent clamor, in which "life, everywhere fuses into one single lamentation," Sinyavasky's own voice rises strong and clear—intensely perceptive, incessantly reflective. His central concerns are fantasy and imagination, in all their manifold ramifications, particularly when they find living expression in art or myth. He glosses remembered books, paintings, episodes from history—always acutely and with a clear-eyed freshness of vision.

Many of his topics are quintessentially Russian, and consequently of limited significance to the eavesdropping Western reader. But there is no question they are intensely meaningful to Sinyavsky. Watching him, one is made uncomfortably aware that most of what passes for art in our so-called Free World is sheer contrived affectation, and most of our criticism mere morbid academicism. For Sinyavsky, on the other hand, art remains a living expression of faith, faith in life and in the inalienable vitality of existence.

Life, faith, art—in Dubrovlag they fused into an integral whole, single and inseparable. "How funny to apprehend myth through the senses, in the same personal way in which one becomes aware of one's body and one's perceptions—just by peering into the bushes, into the night, into the air. But it is possible only on condition that a man be deprived of everything he has and completely isolated."

After six years of imprisonment, Sinyavsky felt "at a loss" on his release, like "a dead man appearing at life's feast." The once-familiar bustle of Moscow now seemed harrowingly oppressive; he found himself yearning for the measured dreamtime of the concentration camp. "There at least you understand that everything has an end — not for nothing is it the house of the dead."
